Budget Estimates Out $500 Million

By WAYNE MACDONALD
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government plans in coming months to pump $60 million into a battle against unemploymtnt, which is expected this winter to be the highest in years.

High unemployment and resultant increases in welfare costs havce already combined to wipe away the surplus Finance Minister Edgar Benson forecast in his last budget, the Commons was told Tuesday.

Instead of the anticipated surplus of $250 million, the federal government will wind up the fiscal year next March with a deficit of approximately the same amount.

This was revealed Tuesday when Treasury Board President C. M. (Bud) Drury tabled supplementary estimates in the Commons for the current budget year.

Drury made clear outside the House that the main reason for the deficit was higher-than-expected welfare costs, which Ottawa shares with the provinces, and severe unemployment anticipated this winter.

Many government departments — notably public works, regional economic expansion, and the department of manpower — will be undertaking projects to make work for the jobless.

Drury said the special programs should create 11,000 man-years of work, or enough employment to hire 11,000 persons for one year.

Since many of the jobs will not last as long as a year, the total number of jobs created will be substantially higher, the treasury board president said.

The total supplementary estimates introduced Tuesday were $457,120,756. They bring total government spending for the fiscal year to $14.2 billion.

Of the near-half-billion dollars in increased spending, $195 million takes the form of statutory payments to the provinces and parliament has no authority over them. The remainder is for programs

Drury Hits Critics Of Watchdog Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury says the Conservatives should swallow their critical tongue on the government's bill to redefine the powers of the auditor-general, since the bill is based on a unanimous committee report assented to by PC representatives.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC-Peace River) says "hogwash."

The bill, tabled in the Commons Monday, would place limits on Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's authority to tell Parliament about any case he thinks displays government blundering.

Under the bill he would have to limit his watchdog growling to ensuring that government accounts are properly kept and money is spent as directed by Parliament.

In an interview today, Drury said Baldwin's criticism of the bill in the Commons Monday was out of place considering the fact that the public accounts committee had unanimously suggested such a bill.

He "supposed" that Baldwin would have to reconcile his differences in view with the PC members of the committee.

In another interview moments later Baldwin said Dury was uttering "hogwash."

Baldwin didn't know how Conservative representatives on the committee had performed in considering the report on which the bill was based, he said, but even if they violently opposed the report's recommendations there is no provision for them filing a minority report.

Since the meetings to draft the report were held in camera, he said, there is no reason to believe that Con-

Ecology Scheme Could Employ 30,000 Students

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government may put students to work planting trees and clearing salmon streams on a massive scale next summer.

This is under active consideration by cabinet now, several sources indicated today.

The program envisages up to 20,000 students replanting logged areas across the country, but concentrated in B.C., Quebec and the Maritimes where unemployment is highest. Some work would be done on the Prairies too.

In addition, another 10,000 could be put to work clearing and improving spawning streams, recreational beaches and park trails.

If undertaken, these make-work programs would be added to a repetition of last summer's successful experiment with crash programs to provide more civil service jobs and militia training for students unable to find vacation work.

One estimate is that it would only cost $12 million to employ 20,000 students — at $10 a day each — planting trees from June through August.

This offers a better cost-benefit ratio than the $8 million it took to provide six weeks of militia training for 10,500 last summer.

Ottawa is struggling with the problem now as part of its general planning to bring down the unemployment rate — a slow process at the best of times.

It doen't want those efforts to be dislocated by extreme job competition from the rapidly increasing student population next summer. There were 306,000 students seeking jobs in 1970.

The vacation period poured 306,000 students seeking work into the labor market in 1968, 346,000 in 1969 and a crisis level of about 425,000 last summer.

Next summer is expected to see more than 500,000 students on the job market, adding tremendous pressure to the weakest employment area.

Current statistics show that the unemployment rate is highest in the 19-24 age bracket at a 9 per cent national average. But some estimate the unemployment rate will approach 40 per cent for those between 19 and 24 by spring.

Longer-range policies are being considered to alleviate the problem for young persons who have left school and the short-range programs are intended to keep jobless students from complicating the recovery — especially since summer jobs in many cases will decide whether they return to school or join the permanent labor force.

Last summer's crash programs were undertaken in mid-June after it became apparent that the student job problem had become critical because of the economic slowdown.

The government pumped almost $28 million into various programs, such as militia training, youth leadership, bilingual courses and extra civil service relief work to create a total of 36,101 summer jobs.

This year it will have to do much more, and the added forestation and stream-clearing programs could boost the total to 60,000 summer jobs if they are approved.

But considerable dexterity in management and luck will be needed to overcome a major obstacle — the shortage of tree nursery stock for a sudden and massive planting program of millions of trees.

Some seedlings could be purchased from the U.S. A substantial proportion of the students sent out into the woods could be employed in ground clearing programs for a second round of tree planting in the following summer.

Relief Supplies Race Death As Pakistan Toll Escalates

DACCA (CP) — Swiss and German aircraft ferried in tons of relief supplies today and President Nixon allocated $10 million to the international rehabilitation effort for survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that inundated a large area of East Pakistan six days ago.

Among Red Cross societies, Communist China's became the biggest single contributor to the Pakistan relief effort with a gift of $1.24 million, the International League of Red Cross Societies, said today. The league said $2.07 million of combined cash and relief supplies have been provided or pledged thus far by 20 national Red Cross societies.

The number of dead remained incalculable. The government confirmed 55,000, but unofficial estimates were from 300,000 to 650,000; the Pakistani relief commissioner, A. M. Anisuzzaman, said he could neither challenge nor confirm them.

CRITICISM MOUNTS

Criticism mounted in Dacca that not enough is being done to help save hundreds of thousands of survivors.

The pro-government newspaper Morning News said: "This is an unparallelled national disaster and should be treated as such . . . at least let us not fail the survivors."

The Pakistan Observer, an independent daily owned by former foreign minister Hamidul Huq Choudhury, claimed "relief goods arriving from foreign countries remain dumped in Dacca as no carrier is available to airdrop them . . . Therefore, relief has not reached thousands of survivors in the offshore islands even six days after the disaster."

Dozens of small islands in the Bay of Bengal were still untouched by relief workers. Survivors told reporters their drinking water came from pools befouled by bodies of human beings and cattle, and their only food was rotting rice kernels they burned before eating to kill the stench.

DISCOUNT CHOLERA

"The incidence of cholera is insignificant compared to other problems of relief here," said Dr. Wiley Mosley, chief of epidemology of the cholera laboratory run by Pakistan and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

The accord consists of a preamble and five articles, the first of which officials said settled the key issue of recognition by Bonn of Poland's post war western frontier along the Oder and Neisse rivers.

This gave Poland large areas of former German land,

Moon Buggy Resumes TV Surface Scanning

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russia's moon buggy has started sending good quality television pictures of the lunar surface back to earth, Tass news agency said today.

Lunokhod's chief designer today explained in Red Star, the armed forces newspaper, how the robot was controlled from earth.

He said the chassis incorporated a number of automatic devices to increase safety of movement, to help control movement, and to carry out scientific experiments to measure the mechanical properties of lunar soil.

The robot has a number of commands to control Lunokhod's movement forward and reverse movement can be carried out as a continuous motion or in stages, when it has "stop-go" motion.

The chassis also incorporates an instrument for collecting scientific information about lunar rock. On command from earth, it automatically carried out a program of measurement of its mechanical properties, the designer wrote.

Three Students Acquitted Of Charges Under War Act

AYLMER, Que. (CP) — Three university students charged under the War Measures Act were acquitted in court Tuesday by Judge James Millar.

Arrested Oct. 17 on a charge of discharging firearms, the day after the proclamation of the act by the federal government, were Thomas Gordon Dolan, 20, Laura Maud Dottin, 20, and Charles Felder Suddutch, 25, all residents of Ottawa and students at Carleton University.

Judge Miller said there was no proof that any of the accused had actually discharged the firearms found in a rountine police check of their car, which included rifles and ammunition.

All three students pleaded not guilty. They were detained for a week under the act and released on bail after the charges were laid.

Aylmer is seven miles northwest of Ottawa.

19 Appear in Victoria Court From Drug Roundup

A total of 19 persons have appeared in Victoria courts since Tuesday to face charges under the Narcotic Control Act and the Food and Drug Act as a result of a massive undercover operation by RCMP drug squads and local police.

Two men appeared today before Judge William Ostler in provincial court and 13 men and one woman appeared Tuesday to face a total of 19 charges of trafficking in various restricted hallucinogenic and narcotic drugs.

Two juvenile males appeared in family and children's court on charges of trafficking in narcotic drugs, and one other adult was to appear before Ostler this afternoon.

They were among 30 rounded up by local police and RCMP Tuesday morning as part of a crackdown that netted 113 suspected traffickers throughout the province.

Some 22 of those picked up in the Victoria area were arrested.

The roundup came after three secret narcotics agents surfaced after months of undercover work in three main areas of the province.

The agents worked Vancouver Island and Greater Victoria, North Vancouver, Chilliwack, Nelson and the Okanagan Valley.

RCMP Staff Sgt. William Murdoch said Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt police worked with RCMP officers and began making arrests at 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Corporal Gerry O'Neill of the RCMP drug squad at Victoria subdivision said five city, five Saanich, two Esquimalt and eight RCMP took part in the local roundup.

All who appeared before Ostler were charged with trafficking offences which ranged from selling heroin to selling marijuana.

The bulk of the charges dated back to the summer months, with the earliest charge July 11 and the latest Oct. 5.

Total bail set in the first 16 cases amounted to $42,000 in cash and sureties, with lowest individual bail set at $1,500 and highest individual bail set at $6,000.

Three men were charged with trafficking in heroin, the only so-called "hard drug" involved, while four men and the woman were charged with trafficking in hashish.

Four men were charged with trafficking in marijuana, and five men were charged with trafficking in the restricted drugs MDA and LSD.

All were remanded to Nov. 23 and 24.

Appearing to face charges were:

William Aitken, 36, of Sooke, trafficking in LSD Aug. 13, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Michael Copley, 19, of 1221 Sunnyside, trafficking in hashish July 18, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Douglas Delmarque, 19, of 625 Niagara, trafficking in marijuana Aug. 10, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Catherine Erdman, of 728 Cloverdale, trafficking in hashish Sept. 29 and Oct. 4 (two charges), bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Ted Gordienko, 22, no fixed address, trafficking in hashish July 11, bail $2,500 cash or surety;

Richard Shaw, address unknown, and Gordienko, jointly charged with trafficking in MDA, July 18, bail $2,000 cash or surety for Shaw, (previous bail applies for Gordienko);

Bruce Polley, 19, of 1070 Gosper, trafficking in Marijuana July 31, bail $1,500 cash or surety;

Francis Grills, 20, of 722 Pembroke, trafficking in heroin July 21 and Oct. 7 (two charges), bail $6,000 surety only;

Harry Kelly, 22, of 214 West Burnside, trafficking in marijuana July 20, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Buddy Nelson, of 1425 Fernwood, trafficking in heroin Oct. 5, bail $3,500 surety only;

Terry Southwick, 23, of no fixed address, trafficking in heroin and trafficking in MDA July 25 (two charges), bail $5,000 surety only;

John Spellman, 20, 325 Ker, trafficking in marijuana July 28, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Timothy Thornley, 20, 1843 Island Highway, trafficking in hashish July 21, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Dwayne Forrest, of 74 Simms, trafficking in LSD Aug. 17 and Aug. 31 (two charges), bail $3,000 cash or surety.

Richard Ogden, 29, of 335 Niagara, trafficking in LSD July 21, bail $2,000 cash or surety;

Garry Roesch, 23, of Duncan, trafficking in hashish July 21 (two charges), bail $2,500 cash or surety.

None of the people who appeared elected trial method or made a plea. Many were not yet represented by counsel, and Aitken said he had not been permitted to telephone a lawyer before appearing.

Ostler told him he would be given such an opportunity well before he appeared in court again.

Grills, facing the two charges of trafficking in heroin, asked if he was entitled to legal aid.

"You are certainly entitled to apply for it," Ostler said, but pointed out that no one was entitled to legal aid as a right.

He set Grills' bail at $6,000 and said it was high because "the offences charged are of the greatest gravity."

He would not post cash bail for the heroin charges, insisting that a surety was all he could accept because of the nature of the substance involved.

'Russia Will Force Novelist to Say No'

Russian novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn will be told if he goes to Stockholm to accept the Nobel Prize for literature he will be leaving Russia forever, a Yale University scholar said here Tuesday.

But Prof. Victor Ehrlich, who was at the University of Victoria to speak on Solzhenitsyn, said the Russian government "can't win" in a decision whether or not to allow the author to accept the Nobel Prize.

"They know that not allowing him to go will bring them political discredit. They also know that he will deliver a ringing speech before a wide international audience in Stockholm, a thing they have every reason to fear.

"I would rule out a decision by Solzhenitsyn to stay in the West if they grudgingly let him go.

"My speculation is they will face him with the decision they forced on Boris Pasternak when he was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature in 1958.

"They told Pasternak he could go, but in so doing he was leaving Russia for ever, and of course he stayed. The same is true of Solzhenitsyn."

Ehrlich spoke today at the University of B.C. and Simon Fraser University. After another talk at the University of Calgary, he will return to Yale.

He was born in Petrograd (now Leningrad), where his father was active in the March revolution of 1917 as a democratic socialist. He came to the West from Warsaw in 1941, and returned to Russia in 1969 as a tourist to meet writers and literary scholars.

He explained in an interview Tuesday why it would be impossible for Solzhenitsyn to leave his homeland:

"They know he is so profoundly Russian and attached to the Russian way of life that he won't go. They know he feels obliged to share the fate of his countrymen and that his feelings are so deeply rooted in Russia the question is merely academic.

"To put such a decision before him is tantamount to saying no."

Ehrlich was skeptical about the impact in Russia of support for Solzhenitsyn from the celebrated cellist Mstislav Rostropovich.

"It will not affect anyone else's future, but will probably seriously damage Rostropovich's future. It will be particularly interesting to see if he is allowed an exit visa to fulfil a concert tour in the West, in the light of his support for the writer and his condemnation of the regime."

He said the regime regards the novelist as a problem which they wish would go away.

"He is a man who tells the truth as he sees it and bears witness to what goes on around him. He is much in the tradition of Tolstoy."

. . . PAKISTAN

A Boeing 707 from West Germany brought in 25 tons of tents, clothing, blankets and medicine, then took off for Turkey to get another load. Two other German planes with 19 tons of goods were due tonight.

Other planes were on their way from the United States, Britain, France, Iran and other countries.

Two civilian helicopters from the American aid mission in Nepal were being flown to Dacca, and four cargo helicopters were en route.

But despite President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan's pledge to "give all help and relief to victims," the only Pakistani aircraft participating in relief work Tuesday was a helicopter that Anisuzzaman said had to be grounded for maintenance after 14 hours aloft. Two small planes with less than two tons' cargo capacity were scheduled to start dropping supplies today.

which Members of Parliament will vote on.

Drury said the statutory payments were excessively high because the provinces could not adequately forecast in advance the high welfare costs they have encountered this year.

To help create employment this winter, the department of national defence — which has had a frozen budget for the past two years — is embarking on a maintenance and capital program worth an extra $1.2 million.

In addition, the supplementary estimates include an appropriation of $75 million for the department of manpower to increase its job retraining program.

The estimates also include a number of expenditures for programs previously announced, including a payment of $10 million for the province of British Columbia for its centennial next year.

The federal grant is to be matched by the provincial government and by municipalities to finance centennial projects throughout B.C.

A supplementary estimate for $69 million is included to service the national debt. High interest rates and a larger-than-expected public debt resulted in an underestimation of funds needed for this purpose.

Also in the estimates is an expenditure of $1.8 million for loans to commercial fishermen for income maintenance, following the closure of some lakes and rivers due to mercury pollution this year.

A $5,000 grant will be made from the estimates to the British Columbia Festival of Forestry.

A total of almost $3 million will be spent for operating and capital expenditures on proposed new national parks in British Columbia, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec.

Some $1.2 million in additional spending is appropriated for the expanded, higher benefits for Members of Parliament in their new pension plan.

A loan of $4.5 million is appropriated for Eurocan Pulp and Paper Co. For construction of a marine terminal at Kitimat.

Drury said the supplementary estimates do not include any of the costs involved in the continuing FLQ crisis in Quebec. Total cost of calling out the military in Quebec and Ottawa has not yet been assessed, Drury said, and it has not yet been decided how governments will split the cost.

Car Dealers Face Debate Before Public

Debate should be lively tonight when a panel of car dealers and a repair specialist face a public curious to know the ins and outs of the automobile business.

The confrontation will take place in the Institute of Adult Studies and is being sponsored by the Greater Victoria School Board's adult education division and the Victoria branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Branch president Mrs. George Forrest says "We expect to have some pretty provocative questions and some of them may find the panel on the defensive."

Adult education co-ordinator A. L. Cartier will be moderator. The car dealers are Peter Pollen and Egon Baumann. The maintenance specialist is Gordon Washington.

At any rate, he said, his party would "fight to the end" the bill's attempt to "severely narrow the range" of the auditor-general's annual report.

The public accounts committee is the only finance committee with an oppositon chairman — Alfred D. Hales (PC-Wellington).

On Monday Hales said he was absent from the committee when the report was drafted.

He said the new bill "tends to curtail the powers of the auditor-general and I think we should be doing the opposite, if anything."

The bill also would provide that the government table responses to the auditor-general's criticisms on the same day his report was tabled in the Commons.

Saanich Engineer Runs in City

A Saanich municipal engineer has filed nomination papers to run for alderman in Victoria in the Dec. 12 municipal elections.

Tony Miller, 39, of 714 Esquimalt Road says he objects to the "callous way that council are chopping people down" at public hearings over land zoning.

Miller's candidacy brings to eight the number of men seeking election. Four are incumbents.

Miller said he wants to see "more equitable" property taxes in the city and he is opposed to "grandoise" plans for upgrading streets for merchants at the expense of residential property owners.

He opposes "speculative" buying of property by the city, and against what he says is the city's policy of using land "purely for the maximum revenue."

Khatib Named Syria Leader

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Ahmed Khatib, former leader of Syria's school teachers, was named president of Syria today, Egypt's Middle East news agency reports.

Gen. Hafez Assad, moderate defence minister who overthrew the Marxist Baath Socialists Friday, will become premier.

In other Mid-East developments, Egypt's President Anwar Sadat appointed his cabinet, virtually the same members who resigned early this week and who served under Nasser.

88 Per Cent Favor Strike

Teachers in Sooke and Saanich Peninsula school districts agree with teachers from Greater Victoria in supporting strike action to get a better pension plan from the provincial government.

Results of the Oct. 30 vote by the 22,000 provincial teachers released Tuesday show that Sooke teachers were 84 per cent in favor and Saanich Peninsula teachers 81 per cent in favor.

Greater Victoria teachers supported the vote by 83 per cent and the provincial average was 88 per cent.

Ronald J. Feness, president of the Sooke Teachers' Association, said Tuesday the average age of teachers in the district was about 30 years.

"The young people really backed it up," he said.

Jim Killeen, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said in Vancouver Tuesday most experts defined an adequate pension as 70 per cent of the individual's final salary, but that B.C. teachers were getting less than half of that.

The average, he said, is about 30 per cent of the teacher's final salary, or about $250 a month.

He stressed that an improved pension plan would not cost taxpayers anything.

"The frustrating thing," he explained, "is that the money to provide decent pensions for our teachers is already in the fund which now totals $165 million."

"The interest alone more than pays for the $6 million presently paid each year in teachers' pensions."

DRUG FACTORY CLOSED

CHICAGO (UPI) — A self-styled sect "archbishop" who was employed in the chemical division of General Mills, one of the nation's largest corporations, was arrested Tuesday as the operator of what authorities called the "largest hallucinogenic drug factory in the Midwest."

Chicago and federal authorities who participated in the raid said David Muncaster, 38, a Harvard graduate and chemist with General Mills' chemical division, rented the apartment where "thousands of dollars" worth of drugs, along with pornographic film and pictures, were confiscated.

Nine others, including Muncaster's 18-year-old son, Allan, were arrested.

PROSECUTOR CHARGES:

'Kill 'Em, Waste 'Em Calley Orders Men'

By WILLIAM GREIDER

FT. BENNING, GA. (WP) — With the tight edge of outrage in his voice, a young army prosecutor described the cruel geography of My Lai hamlet to a military jury Tuesday.

The prosecutor constructed this scene: Some people were finishing breakfast when the troops came to shoot them; One soldier cried as he did the killing; and old man pleaded for his life and was smashed in the face with a rifle butt; a child who survived the group slaughter was tossed into a ditch and murdered by Lt. William L. Calley, the platoon leader on trial for his own life.

Capt. Aubrey Daniel III, the 29-year-old prosecutor from Moncks Corner, S.C., thrust his chin out and, with clear green eyes, stared down the six army officers who are the jury.

"We want you to be there," he told them. "We want to put you there on 16 March, 1968."

For 21 minutes in his opening statement, the captain took the stilled courtroom on a tour of the village—from a rice paddy west of My Lai where Company C landed in helicopters for its combat assault to the irrigation ditch where the Vietnamese child escaped death, then joined his family in a stack of nameless, ageless bodies.

In all, 102 victims are charged to Calley, on trial for premediated murder. As the prosecutor counted the dead scattered through My Lai's bamboo thickets and trails, the 27-year-old defendant sat expressionless, but flushed.

Inexplicably, Calley grinned broadly at one point. It was when the prosecutor recounted how the platoon leader and a sergeant shot down "in cold blood" about 70 people.

At the outset, Daniel conceded an enormous ambiguity in the U.S. government's case against Calley. The dead are South Vietnamese whose names and ages and personal identities are lost and cannot be established, he said.

They are a relative handful of those thousands who have died in that country's long war, but the army will try to recreate the faces and bodies of real human beings as it unfolds its evidence of murder.

"The victims are unamed, gentlemen, and the government cannot prove the names," Daniel conceded. But, he said, the government will prove that there was no combat at My Lai that day, only killing.

"There was no hostile fire," he said, "they executed unarmed, unresisting old men, women and children."

Daniel's narrative was the first time the government has made a public account of what it believes Calley did at My Lai. The recital was sardonic, in a soft southern accent.

Calley's first platoon disembarked from the helicopters about 7:30 a.m., according to the prosecutor. "They didn't receive any fire — no fire from the village," he said.

The first platoon formed a line position with Company C's second platoon and moved eastward through My Lai, but the captain said "they found the village to be undefended. They found old men, women and children. None of them was armed. Some of them were still eating their breakfast."

•

One group of these people was rounded up and gathered at an intersection of the two trails which crossed through the village. Daniel said Calley told PFC. Dennis I. Conti and Sgt. Paul Meadlo: "Take care of these people."

"So Conti and Meadlo had these people sit down on the north-south trail," Daniel said, "and started to guard them. That's what they thought they were to do."

A few minutes later, the prosecutor said: "Calley returns, finds Meadlo and Conti. 'Why haven't you taken care of these people?' " 'Take care of them? We have taken care of them.' "Calley: 'I mean kill 'em, waste 'em.' "

'They were shot down dead in cold blood on that trail. Meadlo crying — he was so repulsed at what he had to do at the direction of Lt. Calley."

A short while later, Daniel related, another rifleman in the platoon, James Dursi, was rounding up civilians from the village and moving them out to an irrigation ditch which runs in a crescent along the southern edge of My Lai. He was joined by Calley, Sgt. David M. Mitchell and Meadlo, still crying.

"Calley orders his men, 'put these people in that irrigation ditch.' And they were pushed and shoved into the ditch, and Calley ordered them executed — men, women and children — and they were," the prosecutor charged.

After the shooting Calley, his radioman and the others moved away from the ditch toward a group of trees. Then Calley personally killed two more people, according to the prosecutor.

"There was an old man by a tree," Daniel said. "The man began to plead for his life. Calley butt-stroked him in the face with a rifle back into the rice paddy." The lieutenant is charged with his murder, too.

•

"At that point," Daniel said, rushing with the details, "someone yelled, 'there's a child getting away. There's a child.' A child somehow had miraculously survived that fire into the ditch. Calley went back and picked up the child, threw him into the ditch and shot him — killed him."

The prosecutor paused, and the account of killing was over.

As Daniel sat down, the quiet voice of Judge Reid W. Kennedy addressed the jury. "I want to remind you," the judge said, "that what you have just heard constitutes the government's allegations and is not to be regarded as evidence."

Mr. Benson Sees It Through

NO CANADIAN FISCAL legislation has had the preliminary exposure to public criticism that Mr. Benson's White Paper on taxation reform has enjoyed. It was a new approach — to present the main features of the government's intentions so far in advance of parliamentary debate on the eventual bill. But in view of the fact that, as Mr. Benson points out, the White Paper contains the most fundamental tax reforms since the income tax was inaugurated in 1917, it was appropriate that the public have a good opportunity to examine the government's thinking.

In the deluge of words, pro and con, it was usually forgotten — again as Mr. Benson emphasizes — that the White Paper embodies "proposals", not specific law, and that the whole purpose of the exercise was to obtain and consider suggestions for improvement of the existing legislation.

What concerns the public now is the question of just how much weight its comments will carry in the final analysis. There have been criticisms of both the principle and the manner of assessing capital gains, (with private homes included as capital); of the proposed tax changes for small businesses; of proposed alterations in levies on inheritances. And there has been overall discussion of the feasibility of trying to implement what is essentially a considerable social change through the medium of a tax law. In the latter connection there has even been a pointed reference in the journal "Trade and Commerce" to the presence in Ottawa's top finance echelons of at least six former Saskatchewan CCF government officials.

In his address here on Monday, Mr. Benson added little to what he has said on frequent occasions over the past year. He again stressed that the proposed tax reforms would be mainly to "correct inequities and injustices", not to raise increased revenue. The fact remains, of course, that having broadened the base of the nation's taxation, a larger revenue increase can follow a relatively small future rise in rates. It is hardly realistic to believe that the federal government will not need and raise larger revenues in years ahead. Mr. Benson's new fiscal structure, whatever its details may be, will be a handy tool to achieve this.

Mr. Benson recognizes that his problem is to find a mean between the two extremes of low taxes to permit all-out economic growth, and high taxes to finance the social improvement programs which the public demands. "Establishing a fair and just balance between these goals and stopping the abuses that exist in our present tax system are our real objective," he says. Whether the long public debate has helped him in this intention is difficult to say — as difficult as predicting whether any other ministers will be encouraged to subject their pet legislation to the painful — although very democratic — erosion of extended public debate. As an experiment in the law-making process it should be adjudged a success. There is no good substitute for nationwide public awareness and participation.

The Answers

New York Times

Those who would look for simple answers to the big questions should go for a country walk on a November afternoon, out where leaves scuffle, squirrels scurry, jays cry havoc and the fundamental shape of the hills is now revealed.

Choose a crisp leaf, no matter whether maple or oak or ash, and try to match it. And know that leaves are almost as varied as snowflakes. Watch the wind as it turns silvery white in a clump of milkweed stalks, a shimmer of floss-borne seeds streaming from each open pod. Watch the glistening streamer from a pasture thistle's head as the wind passes, airy down full of minute flecks of fertility. See how goldenrod and asters add to the aerial cargo, and know a few of the meanings of infinity, numbers that make counting a meaningless mumble.

Hold in your hand the empty shell of a beetle or the shed husk of a locust. See the intricate parts, the ingenuity of life, now gone elsewhere, to the egg, to the pupa. Chitin, the horny substance much like your own fingernail, but only a few weeks ago a living thing, an entity. Watch a rabbit scurry, a crow fly overhead. Look at your own hand. Know that life is more than protoplasm, more than a fertile egg or ovum, that it is ultimate order in complexity.

Feel the earth underfoot. See the sky overhead. Listen to your own pulse, rhythmic as the tides. There are the answers, for those who will feel, and see and listen.

A Cost Anchor on Soaring Education

THE definition of education has exercised philosophers, religionists and teachers for centuries. But it is only within the last 100 years or so, with the introduction of compulsory public schooling, that it has become a political problem, and it is only within the last 20 years that it has become a political problem which must be resolved. This development has occurred because of the transfer of more and more of the costs of post-secondary education from the private to the public sector of society. Prior to this, the public and the politicians were largely indifferent to what went on in the universities and other post-secondary institutions; but the popular demand for higher education and the resulting allocation of huge tax sums for it has unleashed pressures which require, for the first time, that taxpayers and governments decide what education "is" and what, if anything, it is expected to do.

Greer

To this end, the Commission on Post-Secondary Education in Ontario has begun public hearings with a "Statement of Issues" which challenges virtually all of the expectations currently held. But it has not offered a positive concept of education for public examination; indeed, it apologizes, "it is debatable whether the educational world was ever so simple that it could be explained in terms of a single educational philosophy alone."

These are surely ominous words — however obvious they may be — because they invite, if they do not encourage, a continuation of the hydra-headed monster which so frightens everyone now. Of course, the educational world is complex; but it is not the complexity, in the Commission's own words, that presents the real difficulty: "it lies rather in the very nature of education and its role in our society." How solutions can be found without defining that role is rather difficult to see.

The most common, the most powerful belief and expectation of higher education today, for example, is that it is a worth-while investment, producing net economic benefits for both the recipient and society. Assuming this is so, what does it mean in terms of changing the present system?

Barriers to Poor

It means first of all complete removal of the remaining financial barriers to higher education, because equity demands that the state afford equal opportunity to all. This is not the case now; despite the extensive system of government loans and grants designed to enable students from low-income families to attend universities, many are still discriminated against because no recognition is given to the situation where would-be students are required as family breadwinners. Similarly, for reasons which are obscure, students in some areas of graduate study can get public assistance, while those in others cannot.

Secondly, the economic argument for education means that all forms of post-secondary education should be assisted, and assisted equally. Otherwise, what basis is there for assisting a student who wants to be an engineer, for example, but not one who wants to be a chartered accountant? There are many such exclusions now and they make no sense whatever unless it is held that engineers are more valuable than chartered accountants—or clergymen, since divinity students also get short-changed by the public treasury. This is not, however, a distinction which governments make; the truth is there is no rationale to the present system.

If the "investment" or economic rationale is accepted, therefore, all discriminations as regards financial accessibility and the availability of post-secondary programs must eventually be swept away. Higher education would in effect become the tertiary level of free, publicly-supported education.

But there are, it seems to me, at least three fundamental objections to this. One is that it would involve a degree of governmental control over the institutions of higher learning which would probably destroy the system. Secondly, it would be a grossly inefficient and unnecessary use of public money: more and more employers are finding the products of higher education are not much use to them and are developing their own in-service educational programs to train the employees they need.

Thirdly, and most important perhaps, the public purse cannot afford it. Fifteen years ago, government expenditures on higher education involved a few million dollars; today, they run to hundreds of millions ($712,000,000 this year in Ontario, not counting federal contributions); in five years, they will be in the billions. If post-secondary education becomes full-blown public education, these figures could probably be doubled; perhaps the economy could stand it, but certainly the politicians and the taxpayers would not.

The way to avoid this abyss, surely, is not to run into it — or, more accurately, to retreat from the commitment already made. This, to put it bluntly, would involve assigning no economic role to higher education and returning to what might be called the classical definition of education for the sake of education — the acquiring of knowledge, the development of the ability to think, and the pursuit of new discovery.

Employers' Responsibility

Practically speaking, of course, this would require distinguishing between education and training and removing, as far as possible, the vocational emphasis and orientation which now plagues even the so-called "liberal" arts and science programs. Vocational training would become the responsibility of employers or, in the case of the self-employed, of professional associations and guilds under government supervision and, probably, involving some form of contingent repayable loans.

Higher education, in this sense, could then be pursued not as a means to a job but as leisure, as self discovery and improvement, as culturally rewarding. Many no doubt would continue to want and need it before entering gainful employment and it would, I think, be entitled to tax subsidies provided equity governs financial accessibility. But it would, surely, be much cheaper simply because many would not want to go.

Eight Years to Go

ALMOST ANY PEDESTRIAN OR automobile driver will agree with Traffic Engineer David Campbell that traffic in this community is rapidly approaching a critical condition. Mr. Campbell sets eight years as the limit within which we will have to find solutions to congestion. Just what happens at the end of that period, if nothing is done, he does not say. But it is not difficult to imagine.

An overall planning program for the city is long overdue. It should be a program which will lay out the pattern, the climate, and whole appearance of the community — and traffic planning would be a vital and integral part of this.

It must, of course, be done in conjunction with the region as a whole. And traffic cannot be planned unless we know what types of buildings—and hence population density—are to be served.

Year by year the traffic has increased. We now experience in winter the crowded conditions which a few years ago we suffered only in summer at the height of the tourist season. More and more frequently red lights in the downtown core cause cars and trucks to line back along the block until they interfere with traffic in the preceding intersection. That is a foretaste of complete congestion.

The problem involves the rapid increase in private cars on the road — with many families now having two, three or more. But equally important is the question of public transportation, which is at once a contributor to traffic problems and a potential solution to many of them. Traffic regulation is another factor. Far too much city traffic creeps along, causing congestion at intersections. It is common for only one or two cars to get through on a green light, because of the delay caused by someone making a left-hand turn. Too many traffic lights are in conflict, requiring a stop at each of half a dozen consecutive intersections.

Victoria's traffic problem may appear minor in comparison with those of larger centres. But it is considerable and it is growing worse. Finding a solution within eight years means that not a day should be wasted. And it will require some major changes in transportation habits which have grown from the pioneer beginnings of a century ago.

Empire-Building

GREATER VICTORIA'S SCHOOL Board has over-ridden the protest of one of its members that empire-building is under way in the administration. The majority of trustees accept the position that reorganization is necessary and that the times call for expansion and rearrangement at high cost to the taxpayer.

The fact is, however, that one trustee has raised a vital question in school operation in this community. He called the proliferation of activities empire-building and, in doing so, he gave public expression to criticism frequently heard within the school system.

The protesting trustee, Mr. Allan McKinnon, refers to a reorganization proposal for the building and grounds department that is expected to run to about $20,000 in additional salaries. This he characterizes as the $20,000 straw that broke the camel's back. Earlier, he had challenged other cost-escalating re-organizations.

It is useful to note this debate at this particular time. Within a few days elections will be held for some vacancies on the school board. The question of empire-building, with suitable research to provide facts, is a subject that should be debated by candidates and those who still have a year to serve.

With school costs amounting to approximately half the total raised by municipal taxation — and no apparent signs that the upward spiral is about to be reversed — the property owners should be interested. It's their money that meets the bills.

Wrong About the Right

Recently you published a short news item about a young man, Chris Anderson, who planned to appeal a decision to refuse him welfare payments (after having received them for 15 months).

Permit me through the medium of your paper to draw to his attention and, what is more important, to the attention of other people the seriousness of the issues involved.

Mr. Anderson claims the right to reject jobs which do not contribute to his 'becoming a well-integrated person' on the grounds that it is 'psychologically impossible' for him to work at these jobs. This looks like a deliberate attempt to confuse the issues in addition to being a pompous way of saying that there are certain jobs he doesn't like doing. This, of course, is his right, but it is not his right to demand that others provide him with a living while he searches for an 'integrating' job — if, indeed, he does search!

I also wish to point out the absurdity of the federal Canada Assistance Plan ruling (if it is quoted correctly in your newspaper) whereby 'welfare must be given to persons in need irrespective of the cause of the need.' This is a blank cheque to every lay-about and bum in the nation. Such a statement assumes that the productive person is going to be willing to hand over enough of his earnings to save the unproductive person the bother of doing anything. It also begs the question of who will provide the means to live if everyone decides to exercise his 'right' to live on a subsistance level provided by somebody else. — Robert Orr, Mill Bay.

Royalties for Charities

We have such a rich and wonderful province, overflowing with God-given natural resources, which a few influentially powerful people are exploiting to the extreme. Why does not our government collect a royalty of say, $1 per ton on all the coal which is exported to Japan, instead of the miserable 10c per ton, which I understand our government receives? We need not have poverty and privation if substantial royalties were collected by the government on all of our natural resources including lumber and minerals (which belong to the people, so we are told!) and which are being exported to make a very few people wealthy. These royalties could be handled with a view to financing care for crippled children, homes for the aged, chronic care hospitals and nursing homes; help for those in dire need including substantial sums to the heart and cancer funds—all of which deserve help.

I am tired of being canvassed for funds for this and that as I am sure many people are, and it is time the rich resources of our beautiful British Columbia should be shared by those of us who are less fortunate than the Kaisers, the MacMillan Bloedels and the Crown Zellerbachs, to name a few.—(Mrs.) H. A. Renaud, 349 Island Highway.

Money the Issue

Your correspondent Dr. Hugh Macartney takes exception to the fact that I state that the strike of medical specialists in Quebec was called because of disputes over fees. He cites sections 19 and 20 of the Quebec Act, refers to "opting out," and who should license doctors. These questions he describes as matters of "principle" not "money." Section 19 refers to the agreement between the government and the doctors and relates to fees. Section 20 also deals with fees and prevents them charging the patients more than the scheduled fee. "Opting out" is also tied to the question of fees.

The press report dated November 5 indicates the doctors are again trying to negotiate with the government and it states "the talks which centred on the fees the doctors will be paid are to resume . . ." I repeat, money is the issue, not principle. There is really nothing wrong with the doctors' trade union bargaining for more money if their case is justified and provided they are honest enough to admit the issue is money and not "principle".

Are they justified? They are the highest paid group in Quebec as they are in all other parts of Canada. Quebec government computers have produced figures showing that under the new legislation the specialists' average annual income will be $52,000 for a 48-hour week. The total cost of medicare in Quebec will be $256 million and if the demands of the specialists are met this will be increased by another $80 million.—John Wood, 3850 Blenkinsop.

It's Our Environment

With reference to the article, "Mine Dump Plan . . ." in a recent edition of the Victoria Daily Times, it does seem remarkable that the provincial creation, the pollution control brand, will not allow the brief of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC) branch at Duncan to be heard, along with the other four briefs, against the proposed dumping of tailings into Rupert Inlet by the Utah Construction and Mining Company's $74 million base metal operation.

So Mr. Chmelauskas, chief engineer of the pollution control branch, has rejected SPEC's charge that the branch is paying only lip service to the Pollution Control Act by holding the hearing in an inaccessible spot (Port Hardy) and limiting the number of objections. It now seems that the number of objectors, also, is to be limited. Mr. Venables, the director of pollution control, hints that the number attending the meeting will be limited to the capacity of the Lions Club Hall in Port Hardy.

Although Utah estimates that it would cost another $2 million to pump wastes to a land-fill site away from the water, surely the people and government of our still beautiful province can insist that this be done. But as the mining complex is now nearing completion there is little time left.—Peter Richards, 1701 Howroyd.

Back Looking

From the Times of November 18, 1910:

The robbery of the people's heritage to the land of the province still continues. Lands are daily being conveyed to people who have no intention of using them, but who wish to hold them for speculative purposes. At the present time there are in one district of Vancouver Island 50 applications to purchase being advertised in one country newspaper . . . There is no thought for the future, no effort to make a change.

In Some Provinces Anyway, the Trend Is to Youth

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — Canadians have their eyes fixed so firmly on political trends at the federal level that they sometimes fail to recognize the radical changes in the provinces.

It is in the provinces, as recent elections have confirmed, that politics are breaking through the age barrier and throwing up leaders of a new generation.

When John Fitzgerald Kennedy became the youngest president in United States history at age 43, he was hailed as the champion of youth. But it was not really that simple. Youth is not so much a matter of years as of values and attitudes.

Counting the years is a rough measure only of physical vitality. Pierre Elliott Trudeau goes jogging in the grounds of Government House, practices judo and may be as young in the firmness of his flesh as a man 20 years his junior.

John Diefenbaker, when he was Conservative leader, used to produce his doctor to certify that he had the blood pressure of a much younger man, and he challenged sceptical reporters to race him over a measured mile. No doubt he would have won.

British Columbia's Premier W. A. C. Bennett, at 70, likes to deduct 20 years because he does not drink and another 20 because he does not smoke, and calculates that he is in good shape for another couple of elections.

Nova Scotia's Regan

All these aging men may be right in assessing their physical capabilities, but—with Kennedy—they are inescapably members of the world before the Second World War, conditioned by the trials and beliefs of the time.

Trudeau has frankly admitted that his ideas about the world outside Canada and the war against Fascism were shaped by growing up in an Isolationist French-Canadian society.

Diefenbaker, on a visit to the site of his family homestead in Saskatchewan, can talk wonderfully well of the times and circumstances which gave birth to his political ideas. He had a German name in a settlement of British immigrants and he conceived the idea of a Bill of Rights to guarantee equality; the grain dealers who cheated his parents turned him against big business; the eastern financiers gave him his mistrust of Toronto and Montreal. But they are memories of times which have passed and circumstances which no longer exist.

Bennett was a small-time storekeeper during the depression, the harsh years which produced the Social Credit monetary theory and party and shaped his own attitudes as a conservative.

President Kennedy was a younger man, but he first made an impact during the war years by writing about Britain, sponsored by his father who built his legendary fortune on the stock market collapse which launched the depression.

So the dividing line is not merely age, measured in years, but memories and experience. And the great turning point in the history of the past half-century has been the depression leading into the Second World War.

The new men in politics are those educated and conditioned by post-war circumstances. As the war ended 25 years ago, we are talking of men aged today between, say, 35 and 45.

In national politics, Trudeau is 51, opposition leader Robert Stanfield is 56, and NDP leader Tommy Douglas, 66, is likely to be succeeded next year by David Lewis, 61.

But in the provinces, four of the 10 premiers are in their 30s and another is 41.

They are not young politicians serving their apprenticeship in power before moving to the national scene. Very few provincial leaders make a successful transfer to Ottawa.

The young premiers are more likely to be men who have been to Ottawa and decided that the real power is in the provinces, with their jurisdiction over social policy, urban affairs and other close-to-home issues.

Prince Edward Island's Premier Alex Campbell, 37, comes from a different mould. His father was Liberal premier and later Chief Justice of the island, and Alex chose to follow in provincial footsteps rather than seek an appointment to Ottawa.

Quebec's Premier Robert Bourassa, 37, worked in the federal establishment in Ottawa before returning to his province to enter politics and rise quickly to power.

In Ontario, Liberal leader Robert Nixon is 42, and the New Democrats recently chose Stephen Lewis, 33.

The prewar men, the politicians of middle life and older, are thus becoming the exception rather than the rule in provincial affairs.

Alberta's Social Credit Premier Harry Strom, 63, is faced by Tory challenger Peter Lougheed, 42.

Bennett in British Columbia claims to be plugged into God, which puts him outside the normal rules. But if God does not feel quite the same way and pulls the connection in time for the next election, the winner may be NDPer Dave Barrett, 40.

Prime Minister Trudeau, in Ottawa, looks good for another 10 years at least, and sharply rejects suggestions that he may soon get fed up with the job and simply walk away from it. He changed jobs frequently in his earlier life, he says, only because more exciting challenges arose. But who can offer anything more interesting than running the government?

This is a poor look out for all the ambitious younger men, such as Justice Minister John Turner, 41; Health and Welfare Minister John Munro and Minister Without Portfolio Herb Gray, both 39; Defence Minister Donald Macdonald, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford and Manpower and Immigration Minister Otto Lang, all 38; or Indian affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, 36.

They may have missed the boat to power as the postwar generation takes over, and the next federal prime minister may now be in his 20s—one of those young men the young can trust because he is not yet 30.

Einstein's Theory Gets More Proof

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

A Mariner spacecraft 250 million miles from earth has furnished dramatic proof of Einstein's theory of relativity.

Scientists at the California Institute of Technology have found that radio signals beamed to earth from behind the sun by the Mariner 6 spacecraft were slowed down ever so slightly by the sun's gravitational pull. That is precisely what Einstein 54 years ago predicted would happen to light or radio waves from deep space.

"Our experiments show that Einstein's predictions are right," Caltech's Dr. John D. Anderson said. "The best measurements we have for the Mariner 6 radio signals indicate a delay of about 204 microseconds (millionths of a second) as compared with an expected 200 microseconds using Einstein's theory."

Einstein proposed in 1916 his celebrated theory, which is actually a geometrical theory of gravitation. Among other things, Einstein's theory predicts that the velocity of light (186,000 miles a second) or of radio signals should be slowed by the gravitational field of the sun.

Caltech's Dr. Anderson headed a five-man radio science team which in the late summer of 1969 began measuring the way Mariner 6 radio signals reached the earth from various points in space.

The experiment was done by transmitting radio signals from a 210-foot-wide antenna at Goldstone in the Mojave Desert to the spacecraft, which triggered a transponder aboard the spacecraft to amplify and return the signals to the California desert.

The Caltech scientists got what they called "several hundred" precise signals from the spacecraft, starting from the time Mariner 6 approached the sun after completing its mission to Mars in August of 1969.

The signals were analysed by computers at the jet propulsion laboratory, with special emphasis on a series of signals sent by the spacecraft in the spring of 1970 through the solar corona, less than one million miles from the surface of the sun.

In their analysis of the signals, the JPL computers found that the radio beams were delayed about two-tenths of a mile per second when they passed through the sun's field of gravity. The signals took about 43 minutes to travel the 250 million miles to the spacecraft and back again to earth.

The Caltech experiment is the second dramatic confirmation of Einstein in the last three years, and quite possibly the most precise.

The first solid proof of Einstein's theory came in February of 1968 when a team of M.I.T. physicists found that radar signals bounced off the planets Venus and Mercury were slowed down by the pull of the sun's gravity.

Countless physicists have tried to disprove Einstein's theory, but with scant success at best. Those who have suggested theories contradicting Einstein have themselves been quickly contradicted in experiments by other physicists.

The most recent theory contradicting Einstein came from Dr. Charles Brans and Dr. Robert Dicke of Princeton University, who suggested that Einstein's theory was in error because it supposed the sun was round whereas it in fact is oblate.

"If the Brans-Dicke theory were correct," a statement by Caltech said, "the time delay caused by the sun's gravity would have been less than what Einstein predicted. In fact, this has not happened."

New 'Grand Design' for Europe

By RICHARD NORTON-TAYLOR

BRUSSELS — The European Common Market has a new "grand design": complete economic and monetary union by 1980. It foresees a single common market monetary unit, which would rival the dollar as the world's major international trading currency.

To the surprise of many observers, skeptical in view of the scant progress towards economic union the EEC has made so far in the 12 years of its existence, the plan speedily passed the "drawing board" stage.

Feel Their Way

Last week, the plan, entitled "the implementation by stages of economic and monetary union in the community," was officially launched by the European executive commission as a "bill" to be adopted by the six-member nations.

Between now and the year-end, when its first stage is scheduled to go into effect, the market countries will feel their way to an agreement. Meanwhile, Britain, currently negotiating for EEC entry, will look nervously from the sidelines into the implications for her of monetary union in Europe.

In drafting the proposals, the independent commission went out of its way to play down the far-reaching aspects of the plan — with the loss of national sovereignty it implies — for fear of frightening off the member nations. All it did was to incur the wrath of The Netherlands, the member nation perhaps most in favor of federal-type solutions. As a result, a row is already brewing.

Uniform Taxation

The plan foresees the progressive integration of the six member countries' national economies into a single economic unit with uniform rates of taxation, freedom of capital movements, co-ordinated growth rates and, above all, budgetary policies.

Concrete progress towards these objectives is insisted on by the EEC's "economists" — Italy, The Netherlands, and especially West Germany, who with the market's strongest currency has no intention of having to bail out continually other community currencies due to a lack of disciplined economic co-ordination.

The monetary proposals were especialy pushed by the EEC's so-called "monetarists" — France, Belgium and Luxembourg.

The plan specifically envisages the gradual reduction in the EEC of the exchange rate margins — now 0.75 per cent each side of parity. Eventually, the EEC central banks would set their own exchange rates and not set them on the dollar, as they do at present.

At the same time, a European monetary fund would be set up, run by a community system of central banks, and organized on the lines of the U.S. Federal Reserve system. This fund will intervene directly on the EEC exchange markets, and manage the EEC's reserves, made up of the community currencies, and no longer of dollar holdings. This would lead to greater independence from the dollar and from the United States economy.

First Crunch

But the first crunch will come over the issue of the power and political responsibility of these new institutions, and the "centre of decision for economic policy-making" which is also envisaged.

Originally, it was widely pointed out that these new community-wide bodies would demand a revision of the EEC's Treaty of Rome, leading notably to greater powers for the European parliament, now little more than a consultative body.

Anxious not to annoy the French, the European commission avoided any specific mention in its proposals last week of the European parliament. But the Dutch made it quite clear that they will not agree to tighter economic and monetary co-operation without a parallel strengthening of the community institutions.

Ironically, it was France who first pushed the plan following the currency crises which almost wrecked the common farm policy last year.

. . . And Buy a Rose

By ART STOTT

During our young manhood, years ago, a friend very close to me approached his birthday in a familiar quandary. His family had asked him what he wanted as a present. He couldn't think of anything glamorous within an acceptable price range. But he was doing some masonry work. So he asked for two sacks of cement. Members of the family shook their heads, and the more polite among them expressed the view that the request was unusual.

Indeed it was, but practical. It was as practical as the Christmas gift the lady in our house had proposed for me about the same time. I was engaged then in experimental work on the concoction known as the Tom and Jerry — purely as a research project, of course.

We served the libation in the good china she had received as wedding gifts and on other ceremonial occasion. The lady thought it would be an excellent idea if she presented to me a set of cups and saucers suitable for Tom and Jerry serving — and they could be used instead of the good china for tea and coffee when that was appropriate.

Admitting the practicality of the suggestion, I nevertheless found it unappealing. I agreed, however, on the proviso that I would get her a good salt water salmon fishing rod for the same Christmas. She does not go salt water salmon fishing, but she got the point. I also was merely being practical in a zany sort of way.

My reaction to Resources Minister Ray Williston's suggestion that we plunk the wad due from Ottawa as British Columbia's centennial grant into an environmental control centre is somewhat similar to my reaction to the offer of a set of teacups as my Christmas present, or my friend's two sacks of cement for his birthday.

Mr. Williston's plan is essentially practical — maybe too practical. After all, it's our birthday, and, dammit, can't we be a little less practical on such occasions?

I'm quite prepared to admit the value of an environmental control centre. Very likely it is essential to our future well-being, and the well-being of those who come after us. If we require it, let's get it. Any nation that can afford the cosmetics we lathered on the raddled ship Malaventure can afford an environmental control centre. But isn't this the pork and beans of existence? Aren't we entitled to some sort of a fling on our hundredth anniversary?

Maybe, in recent years here, we've been over-centennialed. Maybe we're a bit groggy from the experience and would profit from the ultra-sanity of big investment in an essential service, rather than another glass or two of champagne to mark the event and upset our stomachs.

Yet I can't help feeling that whenever someone offers a big, beautiful present to us collectively, somebody among us will take a look at the money allocated for it and say to himself, that's the kind of dough I'd like for my special project; this is the magnified equivalent of two bags of cement or a set of cups and saucers.

It hasn't come to my notice yet, but it wouldn't surprise me if someone pointed out that we could use the federal grant toward providing the sewer system we need in the capital of British Columbia. Socking the funds into the sewer wouldn't quite represent a splurge on a birthday party. But it would be practical, highly useful and esthetically valuable — if you look at it in the right light.

The pragmatist will tell you that we need sewer improvements. And we'll get them — at enormous expense. My spirit doesn't lift, though, at the prospect of gaily dancing above the outfall.

We could use any found money that came our way for innumerable projects — roadwork, airport runway extension, better harbor facilities, watershed development. These are all necessities of the present or the future. But are they exactly what we want for a birthday gift?

Occasionally I begin to feel a bit hag-ridden by the Puritan ethic that rejects extravagance. My thoughts turn to the unknown Eastern philosopher who is supposed to have said that if he had two loaves of bread he'd sell one and buy a rose. Couldn't we, maybe, buy a rose once in a while, also? Say every 100 years or so?

Girl Totes Flag In Public Penance

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A pretty brunette teen-ager lifted a heavy staff and five-by-eight-foot U.S. flag to her shoulder and paraded three miles through chilly Cambridge streets.

Martha Meyers, a 17-year-old high school graduate, said her court-imposed march was "better than going to jail"

Few, if any, of the thousands who saw Tuesday's strange procession—a mini-coated girl with flapping banner, flanked by sombre court officers and led by a police cruiser—could guess what prompted it.

Last year at Arlington high school, Martha, who admits she is "easily talked into things," burned a flag in an empty classroom. It wasn't a political protest, she said, just a bit of demonstrative reaction echoing student opposition to the way a public address system was used in classrooms.

She wept last April when a district court judge told her she was a "good candidate for a college campus . . . if she ever gets there she'll be a leader with a Viet Cong flag."

"I'm sick of these protesters," said Judge Edward Viola then, and he sentenced her to six months in jail.

It was an appeal from that sentence that brought Martha to court Tuesday.

"Do I understand that you're remorseful for what you've done?" asked Judge Frank Thomasello.

"Yes, your honor," came the weak-voiced reply.

"Would you carry that flag through the streets of Cambridge to Harvard Square?"

"Yes."

The temperature was about 40 degrees outside the courthouse as the girl took the flag and its nine-foot staff in her bare hands. Flag and pole weighed 15 pounds.

The three-mile walk took about 45 minutes. When her hands grew cold, one of the four court officers gave her his gloves. Her small hands were lost inside them. Both hands on the pole, she turned her head and parted her teeth to accept a stick of chewing gum from the guard on her right.

Back in the courtroom, Judge Thomasello said it had been reported that Martha conducted herself with dignity.

F-310: what else can it do?

Smoother idling • less stalling • fewer repairs • longer engine life • better mileage — these are the extra benefits from Chevron with F-310.

Most motorists have read and heard about how F-310* reduces exhaust emissions from dirty engines and helps keep clean engines clean. But what else can F-310 do? Answer: It can improve over-all engine performance. Here two Chevron Research Company scientists who developed F-310 tell you how.

Answering questions about F-310 and engine performance at laboratories of Chevron Research Company, are Dr. E. D. Kane, President, Chevron Research, and Dr. J. H. Macpherson, Vice-President.

1. CAN F-310 HELP GIVE SMOOTHER IDLING?

Dr. Kane: YES. F-310 helps remove the deposits that are one of the major causes of rough idling. If you do not use F-310, these deposits can gradually build up in your carburetor and PCV (positive crankcase ventilation) valve. This causes the engine to burn gasoline inefficiently, slow down, and vibrate. F-310 helps remove these deposits, idle speed returns to normal, engine smooths out. You can feel the difference!

2. I DREAD STALLING IN TRAFFIC. CAN F-310 HELP?

Dr. Kane: Engines stall when the idle speed drops too low. When deposits are the problem, F-310 is the answer.

3. CAN F-310 REDUCE REPAIR AND MAINTENANCE COSTS?

Dr. Kane: YES. For example, F-310 can get a carburetor almost as clean as boiling it out mechanically. F-310 can also remove deposits from the critical PCV valves and from intake valves and ports. Cleaning or replacing these parts could otherwise be very costly.

4. DOES F-310 IMPROVE MILEAGE?

Dr. Kane: YES. A dirty engine wastes gasoline, especially in stop-and-go driving. By cleaning dirty engine parts, and helping keep clean engine parts clean, F-310 helps you use less gasoline when your car is idling and when you drive at speeds up to 25-30 miles per hour. Most cars spend a lot of time in traffic, so you can see how important this saving is.

5. CAN F-310 BOOST POWER?

Dr. Macpherson: YES. As cars accumulate mileage, deposits can build up around the intake valves and ports. This restricts the flow of the air/fuel mixture, depriving the engine of the necessary fuel and causing a reduction in power. F-310 can remove these deposits and restore the lost power.

6. CAN F-310 HELP MAINTAIN NEW CAR PERFORMANCE?

Dr. Macpherson: YES. Of course, F-310 cannot lower the exhaust emissions in a new car below the level for which the engine was designed. But F-310 does help keep a new car in essentially new car condition by preventing the build-up of harmful deposits that cause poor performance.

7. CAN F-310 HELP AN ENGINE LAST LONGER?

Dr. Macpherson: YES. F-310 can keep oil rings and oil screens clean. This helps lubricate certain engine parts better, and adds to their life. Dirt and deposits are damaging to engine metal. F-310 helps eliminate this problem to help engines last longer.

8. DOES A CAR HAVE TO BE SMOKING BEFORE F-310 CAN IMPROVE PERFORMANCE?

Dr. Kane: NO. Visible smoke is indicative of extreme conditions. Black smoke can be temporarily cured by mechanical adjustment. But this doesn't clean the PCV valve or carburetor, and eventually further adjustments are not effective. F-310 goes to work long before this condition is reached by removing or preventing deposits which cause visible smoke.

9. MY CAR GIVES OFF BLUE SMOKE. DOES IT AFFECT PERFORMANCE AND CAN F-310 HELP?

Dr. Macpherson: Blue smoke means oil is burning, usually as a result of piston ring wear which allows oil to get into the combustion chamber. This is a severe engine performance problem and a job for a mechanic, not for F-310. Sometimes you may also see white exhaust. This is generally water vapor and most cars emit some when they first start up. It doesn't mean anything is wrong with your car.

CAN OTHER INGREDIENTS (ADDITIVES) IN OTHER GASOLINES DO THE SAME JOB OF IMPROVING PERFORMANCE?

Dr. Kane: NO. In its ability to clean dirty engine parts and keep clean engines clean, F-310 is more effective than any other additive in any gasoline that we know of. We have produced independent scientific proof of our claims for F-310. Others have made similar claims for other additives, but no one has come forward with independent proof that we have seen.

F-310 is patented, and we have offered to make it available to other oil companies.

*Trademark pending for Polybutene Amine Gasoline Additive.

F-310: Cleaner Air--and improved engine performance, too!

F-310 was developed to reduce exhaust emissions from dirty engines and to help keep clean engines clean. This is an important contribution to cleaner air. But we also believe that cars should be a pleasure to drive, and not a constant source of expense. That's why we are pleased to provide extra performance benefits with F-310. A big plus for motorists who use Chevron with F-310.

OPPOSITION DEMANDING REVIEW BOARD

Act Gives Ottawa 'Powers Granted Hitler'

By KEVIN DOYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition parties delivered a desk-thumping Commons denunciation Tuesday of what spokesmen described as the government's entrenched resistance to suggested changes in the proposed public order bill.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said that without some of these changes, the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, would give the government "the same kind of powers as were handed to Adolf Hitler."

Debate on the public order bill is not expected to resume until next Monday. Today and Thursday the House is to debate a Conservative motion scoring government economic policies. On Friday it is to adjourn for the funeral of Bernard Pilon, the government whip and MP for Chambly who died Tuesday.

The primary aim of Mr. Woolliams, a Calgary lawyer, and that of David Lewis (NDP—York South) was to force the government to set up a review board to protect civil rights under the act, which replaces regulations under the War Measures Act invoked Oct. 16 to deal with terrorism in Quebec.

Both MPs moved amendments calling for the creation of such a board. Mr. Lewis' was defeated, Mr. Woolliams' is yet to be voted on.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield made what many MPs considered an exceptionally impressive speech, recommending a similar review procedure. But he was quick to dispel any notions that he might vote against the bill because the recommendation was rejected.

POWER 'UNJUSTIFIED'

". . . One cannot possibly justify powers . . . being granted in this bill without some recourse, without providing some right of review," Mr. Stanfield said as the Commons continued clause-by-clause study of the bill.

". . . I say this House would be derelict in its duty in creating the powers set forth . . . without setting up a reasonable source of review."

Mr. Stanfield said outside the Commons, however, that he would vote for the bill when it reaches third and final reading as he supported it at first and second reading.

The Conservative party had called on the government to produce temporary legislation to replace regulations under the War Measures Act and this now had been done.

Justice Minister John Turner said the government opposes the creation of a review board because this was the sole responsibility of the Quebec attorney-general.

The provinces had the constitutional right to administer laws whether they were federal or provincial.

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) a former New Brunswick attorney-general, said he was greatly disturbed by the government's "intransigence" on the review-board issue. He said outside the House he will vote against the bill.

In the Senate, Senator Paul Desruisseaux (L—Quebec) said many people from his province were being brainwashed mainly by "extremist educators from other countries."

He said the aim in most schools seems to be directed at blaming English-Canadians for all social ills in Quebec.

In the Commons, Pierre De Bane (L—Matane), who has been one of the strongest critics of the public order bill, moved three amendments Tuesday. All were defeated.

His first two motions were aimed at forcing police to acquire warrants wherever possible before making arrests and making it an offence for an employer to fire an employee arrested under the bill but not charged.

His third amendment called for an explicit guarantee that goods seized by police in their investigations would be returned to their owners.

RAPS POLICE

Mr. Lewis said police forces now investigating terrorism in Quebec have been guilty of "scandalous, unforgivable action" in arresting 450 people but having evidence that warranted charges against only 43 of them.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont), the only MP to vote against the bill at second reading, said the police, by making so many arrests in their investigation, have shown themselves "woefully short of good judgment."

Mr. Lewis moved an amendment, also defeated, that would have required police to have "probable and reasonable grounds" to suspect a person is a member of an unlawful organization before any arrests were made.

In its present form, the act would permit police to arrest anyone they have reason to suspect may belong to an outlawed group such as the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Mr. MacDonald said the bill leaves the decision to arrest almost exclusively to the whims of individual police officers.

"If he gets up in the morning after a poor night, tired and irritable, and he runs into somebody he does not like . . . he can place that person under arrest . . . the reasons may be good, bad or indifferent."

Facilities Not Used, Critic Says

Walter Donald, who is running for a seat on the Greater Victoria School Board, said Tuesday that recreation facilities in Oak Bay schools are not fully used.

He challenged Ald. Brian Smith's statement Monday that Oak Bay schools are booked solidly after hours.

Donald said many schools are available on weekends at a $3 per hour rate.

Furthermore, he said, the school board's building and grounds committee plans to recommend greater after-hours use of schools.

"I think the activity centre proposed for Oak Bay is a good idea in principle. But he (Smith) should get his facts straight before saying the schools are booked solid," Donald said.

An activity centre would likely be used by the Oak Bay recreation commission, which, Donald said, already uses several schools after hours.

This raises the potential problem that such a centre would diminish existing school use, he said.

Missile Progress Gives Russia First-Strike Power

By GEORGE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — Latest Soviet tests indicate Moscow is well on the way to perfecting the multi-headed MIRV missile, informed officials said this week.

The evidence, though still fragmentary, has touched off a behind-the-scenes debate within the Nixon administration about the seriousness of the Soviet MIRV threat.

The outcome of this debate will influence the American position at the SALT talks and the future of President Nixon's anti-ballistic-missile (ABM) defence.

MIRV is the technique of packing several H-bombs on one missile and sending each of the bombs to a different target. Or all the warheads can gang up on one target for greater destructive power.

Until now, the Soviet Union has displayed only the MRV technique of sending three individual H-bombs aboard one rocket into the same general area — not to different targets. MRV stands for Multiple Re-entry Vehicle, MIRV for Multiple Independently-Targetable Re-entry Vehicle.

Some arms control specialists argue that once both sides deploy highly accurate MIRV missiles, there will be greater temptation to strike first rather than risk having ICBMs destroyed on the ground by MIRVs.

The United States already has the MIRV weapon on the line — the Minuteman 3 ICBM. But the Pentagon argues Minuteman 3 is not accurate and powerful enought to knock out the Soviet ICBMs in a surprise strike.

Defence officials therefore insist Minuteman 3 fits in with the American policy of "second strike" — firing only after being fired upon.

But a Soviet MIRV could be more menacing than its American counterpart. The reason is that the big Soviet ICBM known as the SS-9 can lift a much bigger load of H-bombs than the American Minuteman 3.

The Pentagon estimates that the SS-9 can carry three H-bombs of five megatons each — about 30 times more powerful than the 3 H-bombs in the nose of Minuteman 3.

If the SS-9 were to combine this type of destructive power with the accuracy achieved by the lighter Minuteman 3, Russia would indeed have a "first strike" type weapon at its disposal — one which could destroy American missiles buried underground.

★ ★ ★

Just how close Russia is to such a weapon is what the debate is all about. Pentagon spokesmen will not even confirm that Russia has started its latest announced round of missile tests in the Pacific, far less what Western observation techniques have detected.

This latest Western tracking, by radar and destroyer, has revealed Soviet missiles with more manoeuvrability and quicker release of the individual warheads — fundamental to the American-style MIRV.

The idea is to program the carrier rocket to start manoeuvring shortly after launch and release the warheads at different points along the flight path. The quicker the release, the more time the warheads have to spread apart as they fly towards their targets.

Conservative estimates are that these new "anomalies" — as some official term the Russian rocket manoeuvres — do not mean that the Soviet Union is about to close its "MIRV gap" with the United States. The evidence is not hard enough.

However, Pentagon planners often assume the worst when recommending weaponry to counter the Soviet threat. Thus, these new Soviet missile tests could prove highly significant in the debate on how much is enough for defence.

UAW Turns Down Russian Support

DETROIT (AP) — A $50,000 gift offer from a Russian workers union has been "courteously rejected" by the United Auto Workers, a UAW spokesman has confirmed.

It was learned that UAW President Leonard Woodcock mentioned the offer last week when the union's national General Motors Council met behind closed doors to recommend ratification of a new contract with the auto-maker.

"We had enough trouble in connection with the strike without getting Moscow gold involved," Woodcock told delegates.

We gave Mrs. Dunfield an advanced pack of new lower phosphate "all", reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"I first started using "all" when we lived in the interior of B.C. The water was hard there and "all" gave me very satisfactory results. Also the concentrated action of "all" made it easier on my automatic washer. I have used "all" regularly since. The new low-phosphate "all" seems to wash just as well and is O.K. by me."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining "all's" high quality performance.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies over the lower mainland cleared overnight and brisk westerly winds developed behind a weather system which moved rapidly southeastward. Other areas remained mostly cloudy with a shower here and there.

A weather system moving southeastward along the coast today will bring increasing cloud and periods of rain to western regions today and overnight with some clearing Thursday afternoon. Colder air and snow will move into the central interior and Cariboo regions tonight and spread southward into the Kootenays on Thursday. Brisk northerly winds will accompany the cold outbreak which is not expected to reach coastal regions.

Saanich Firemen Settle

Saanich municipality and the firefighters union have agreed on a new one-year contract for 1970, Mayor Hugh Curtis announced Tuesday.

He said the settlement follows the scale established in Victoria of 5.55 per cent increase. This amounts to $30 a month for a fourth year, or first-class, firefighter effective Jan. 1 and $12 a month July 1 on the old rate of $649 a month.

In addition, the municipality will contribute an extra 2.5 per cent to superannuation with the employees paying an extra 2.4per cent.

Curtis described the settlement as "very satisfactory" for both sides.

Hospital Wing to Go

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Tuesday authorized the Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster to award a $2.3-million contract for construction of 174 beds which will enable the hospital to demolish its "obsolete and hazardous 1912 wing."

The old wing has been a hot political issue for several years, with critics of the government charging unnecessary delay in approving replacement of the firetrap structure.

U.S. BILL FACES HOUSE TEST

Battle Looms Over Import Quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of tighter import quotas mounted an offensive today to rewrite the proposed Trade Act of 1970 in the House of Representatives despite the leadership's take-it-or-leave-it ruling.

Representative Charles Vanik (Dem. Ohio) said free-trade forces could muster 150 votes to kill a rule under which the bill must be approved or rejected without amendment. But that would be far short of the required majority if anywhere near all the 434 House members show up for today's important debate.

The bill's floor manager, Wilbur Mills (Dem. Ark.), has indicated he will pull it off the floor rather than open it to what he says could be wholesale, hastily voted revision.

The bill would shrink allowable imports of textiles, footwear, apparel and other items, freeze the present presidential-ordered oil-import quotas into law and set up a formula for imposing automatic quotas on other products, subject to presidential veto.

A House vote on the bill—which the state department opposes as inviting possible "trade war" retaliation abroad—is expected Thursday. Passage is expected. It then goes to the Senate.

Mills contends the bill emphasizes negotiation with foreign importers and sets quotas only on low-priced foreign goods that directly threaten competing U.S. industries.

But Representative Sam M. Gibbons (Dem. Fla.), charged the bill is a conglomeration of quotas for congressmen representing districts with industries that want to curb foreign competition.

"This is put together as a very careful package," Gibbons said, "to get the textile votes, the footwear votes, the furskin votes, the glycerine votes and put them all in the same boat and tell them not to rock it."

Those are some specific items on which import quotas would be cut to 1967-69 levels, up to one-third the present imports in some cases, trade sources say. The new quotas could be increased a maximum five per cent a year.

The bill also would keep the present quota system for oil imports, prohibiting transition to a less restrictive tariff system on foreign oil.

Outbreak Feared

EDMONTON (CP) — There are definite signs Alberta is about to have an outbreak of rabies, Dr. David Secord of the University of Alberta medical faculty said Tuesday. He said that although the province had been relatively free of rabies for the past 12 years, two cases had been reported recently in different areas.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Chrysler

Chrysler Canada Ltd. will build a $15 million automotive parts warehouse at Mississauga, a suburban community adjoining Metropolitan Toronto.

President Ron W. Todgham of Chrysler Canada said the 805,000-square-foot building will serve as the central parts depot for national operations. Occupancy is expected by early 1972.

Home Oil

Home Oil Co. Ltd. reports net earnings for the first nine months were $261,000 or four cents a share compared with $4 million or 60 cents a share for the same period last year.

President R. A. Brown said the decrease arose mainly because of a sale of Calgary Power Ltd. shares and said it would be offset by a gain of $2.8 million from the sale of Trans-Canada PipeLine shares in the fourth quarter.

"Earnings and cash flow were adversely affected by higher interest costs and net earnings were further reduced by increased charges for depletion related to exploration expenditures in Alaska," Brown said.

Revenue for the first three quarters of 1970 were $21.9 million, up 9.9 per cent.

CDP Data

CDP Computer Data Processors Ltd. lost $378,125 during the year ended June 30, compared with a profit of $157,997 the year before.

Gross revenue declined to $1.26 million from $1.56 million.

The company said in its annual report that cost-reduction programs started in the third and fourth quarters of its fiscal year would soon have an effect.

An offer to take over Computamatics Ltd. in exchange for 215,000 shares of CDP has also been accepted.

Union Acceptance

More than $500,000 improvement in gross operating income resulted in net earnings of $677,000 or $87,000 higher than a year ago, reports Union Acceptance Corp. Ltd. for the nine months ended Sept. 30.

Gross was up about 7 per cent to $7.89 million against $7.38 million, while cost of borrowed funds was higher along with other operating expenses and income taxes.

Per share earnings after first preference shares amounted to 64 cents, up 10 cents.

Mineral Mountain

Continuation of an exploration program entered into with Great Plains Development Co. of Canada Ltd. is agreeable, reports Mineral Mountain Mining Co. Ltd., which holds Wollaston Lake property with Jersey Consolidated Mines Ltd.

Mineral Mountain had 80 per cent interest in two prospecting permits showing uranium possibilities, with Jersey holding the balance. In March 1969 Great Plains undertook to explore the property to earn up to 51 per cent interest.

Three months ago Mineral Mountain sold 25.5 per cent interest in one permit to Great Plains, which has now become associated with the German firm Uranerzbergbau to the extent of 25 per cent, leaving Mineral Mountain and Jersey as junior partners if Great Plains completes its exploration program.

Scandia Mining

Development of its Sturgeon Lake, Ont., property is being considered by Scandia Mining and Exploration Ltd. by means of working option or by raising its own capital through an underwriting.

Drilling of the claims is expected to start with freezeup, based on encouraging results of a deep induced polarization survey on group one.

Great Northern

Per share earnings of Great Northern Capital Corp. Ltd. rose a substantial 30 cents to 86 cents during the first three quarters of 1970, based on income of $24.36 million and net income of $1.99 million against $19.4 million and $1.28 million a year ago.

The fourth quarter is expected to slacken somewhat, but year-end figures should still reflect growth, said president R. H. McIsaac.

TWO BANKS APOLOGIZE TO CUSTOMER

WASHINGTON (WP) — A New York bank with $282 million in assets and a Maryland bank worth $25 million have completed a week-long apology to a Gaithersburg Md., man for the "unjustified repossession" of his car last spring.

The banks, the Marine Midland Trust Co. of southern New York and the State National Bank of Bethesda, Md., ran a series of five newspaper ads to "publicly apologize" to James D. Barrier, 26, 'for any embarrassment or inconvenience we may have caused."

Attorneys for Barrier and the Maryland bank said it was the first time they knew of that a bank has made such a public admission. It came as part of a "wrongful repossession" suit filed by Barrier.

Exchange Head Blasts Members

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The president of the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday night blasted members of his own industry for "blatant gimmickry" and called for sweeping changes to prevent the "fragmentation" of the securities markets.

In a speech to the Economic Club of New York, Robert W. Haack — who emphasized that he was speaking as an individual and not expressing the policy of the exchange — broke sharply with the Wall Street "party line." Brokers, plagued by a wave of failures in recent months, have insisted that they need higher commission rates, a prohibition on mutual funds and other institutions joining the exchange and a government-backed insurance program to protect investors.

COMPLETE OVERHAUL

In his speech Tuesday night, however, Haack called for:

- A complete overhaul of the exchange's rules and regulations, its governing board and its voting procedures to make the big board "responsive to the needs of the public and the membership."
- Elimination of reciprocal trade practices, which he called "mazes of blatant gimmickry."
- Eventual elimination of fixed commission rates on all transactions, starting with a limited test "for a specified trial period" on large trades.
- "Unbundling" of brokerage charges so that investors would not pay for services they do not use, and an intensive study to provide exchange access to non-member brokers.
- Corrections in "the disparity of regulation of securities markets in the United States."

Haack's speech is certain to cause a storm in Wall Street. Some observers feel, in fact, that it may lead to a call for his resignation from the post he assumed in September, 1967. But sources close to the exchange president said the speech reflects strong convictions which have been developing for some time and which Haack felt had to be brought into the open for the good of the securities industry itself.

Pegging the speech — which he wrote himself — around the "fragmentation" of the central marketplace, Haack said "it is an unusual and interesting phenomenon that the market with the greatest degree of regulation, greatest capital and the most impressive record for depth and liquidity should find itself being fragmented."

The fragmentation, he said, has been accomplished through the use of regional stock exchanges and the "third market" — over-the-counter dealers who trade in NYSE listed stocks. In 1967, he said, these two areas accounted for just over 10 per cent of all trading in NYSE stocks. Today, he added, they account for almost 20 per cent. "The fact is that most business is taken to the regional exchanges by our own members," he said.

While some of the success of the regional boards has been "properly achieved," Haack said that "in the main, their success has been predicated on their willingness to adopt less rigid rules concerning institutional membership and-or to engage in reciprocity. As a result, these market places, with little or no depth or liquidity, have become nothing more than rebate mechanism to get commissions to those who do not qualify or to return them to institutions."

Five Mine Firms Consider Merger

Shareholders of five B.C. mining companies are considering terms of a proposed merger that would see a new firm emerge to explore mining development.

Mariner Mines Ltd. said it has reached agreement with the four other companies to form Mariner International Resources Ltd., pending shareholder, Vancouver Stock Exchange and B.C. Securities Commission approval.

The other companies are Consolidated Skeena Mines Ltd., Consolidated Van-Tor Resources Ltd., Madrona Explorations Co. Ltd. and Yukon Antimony Corp. Ltd.

Under terms of the merger, one share of Mariner International would be exchanged for each 1½ Mariner Mines, each four Consolidated Skeena, each 4½ Madrona, each 10 Consolidated Van-Tor and each 10 Yukon Antimony.

Every three Mariner International shares so issued would carry one share purchase warrant valid for 15 months.

It is planned to undertake additional financing after the merger, which would determine the price of exercising the warrants. A price 10 per cent over the price paid to the Mariner International tresury is suggested.

Mariner Mines has common stock and A and B warrants trading on Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Merchandise Imports Slump

OTTAWA (CP) — Merchandise imports into Canada slumped during October to a value of $1,129 million, down by almost 13 per cent from the $1,296 million of a year earlier and prolonging the 1970 stagnation of import activity.

With a previously-reported strong export performance valued at $1,454 million for the month, Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported an unprecendented one-month surplus of merchandise trade of $325 million.

For the first 10 months of the year, the surplus of export sales over import purchases was a record $2,252 million, up from $561 million in the same period of 1969.

Teen Centre Wants Adults Around

By DONNA CLEMENTS

LAKE COWICHAN — A teen centre has been started here that is not meant to be a refuge from the adult world. Quite the contrary. It wants adults around.

Beth Manning and Lyn Bowman, staff members at the Gestalt Institute of Canada at Lake Cowichan, said the teen-age townhouse started in October was their idea but it is the kids' place and responsibility.

"We wanted a place where kids from 13 to 19 could be together," explained Miss Manning. "We want to connect them with people in the community who have talents the kids want to learn. We are willing to help out with anything like arts, crafts, mechanics, electronics. Any kind of activity at all."

Miss Manning said that, although Gestalt is paying the first couple of months' rent for the old store they have rented in the centre of the village, the project so far is completely hers, Bowman's and the local youths.

Miss Manning, 26, originally from South Carolina, was a teacher and furniture store manageress in California before coming to the institute six months ago.

Bowman, 23, of Vancouver, was a staff member at the Saturna Island Free School until he joined the Gestalt Institute's staff 10 months ago.

The Gestalt Institute, whose main purpose is to provide professional training and personal development for professional people, was formed in Lake Cowichan in June, 1969, Miss Manning explained.

It also provides a place for young people to come for therapy and an introductory experience for anybody to explore self-therapy.

The young couple, who are involved in this project because they enjoy working with young people, said they have about 25 youths in the district involved in the centre and many more have just dropped in.

The response from school, village and chamber officials to the project has been favorable, Miss Manning said. But they still need many adults to work along with them to keep the centre in existence.

She explained that the project is experimental and, the youth make all the rules except for two: no drugs and no liquor on the premises.

"So far most of the townhouse members' energies have gone into cleaning, decorating and painting the premises," Miss Manning said. "We have an arrangement with the National Film Board where we will show one of their films on Friday evenings.

"Friday and Saturday evenings is when we have most kids around. We are also open during lunch hours, for a while after school and all weekend."

Besides the talents of adults "we also need furniture, old carpeting and financial assistance," she stressed.

Housing for Aged Studied

DUNCAN — City council will study a $130,000 senior citizens' housing project proposed by the Cowichan branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

The Legion's housing committee chairman, Don Williamson, formally applied to council to obtain a piece of land on Canada Avenue at the site of the city's public workshops.

Mayor Jim Quaife said council could not commit itself at present.

"We agreed to undertake further study of their proposal," he said. "I expect that the study will include discussions with the regional board because the use of the complex would not only involve people from the Duncan area but also from residents in other parts of the district. Much ground work will have to be done."

Welfare Bill Upsets City's Budget

DUNCAN — A $45,000 increase in city of Duncan's 1970 budget is mainly due to an unexpected $72,000 increase in the city's wefare costs.

City accountant Bill Ross said today that he originally estimated the annual welfare expenditure at $192,000. But several increases this year in the per capita rate for municipal shares of welfare costs had boosted this figure to $264,000.

At the beginning of the year, the rate was 96 cents. It has been $1.58 since Sept. 1.

The cost increase gives a revised total budget of $1,322,197. Ross said this does not include the water works account which remains at $162,000.

Other large expenditures are: education, $317,734; protection to persons and property, $139,777; general government, $99,250; public works, $82,220.

Vancouver Names Manitoba Man To Head Its Welfare Department

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Boyd, assistant deputy minister of the Manitoba Health and Social Development department, has been named welfare administrator in Vancouver, effective Jan. 1.

The 43-year-old Winnipeg native was chosen Tuesday over 45 other candidates for the $23,000-a-year post.

A statement released by city council said: "Council feels we are indeed fortunate to obtain a man of such stature to head a department that will be facing ever-increasing problems during the coming years."

The position had been open since early this year when administrator Ted Hill retired.

Acting administrator Frank McDaniel and other top officials of the department resigned later and charges were levelled that the department was in "administrative chaos."

Industrial Drop Dims U.S. Hopes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The worst monthly drop in industrial production in more than a decade has dimmed Nixon administration hopes that the U.S. economy is snapping back and moving toward recovery.

Seasonally-adjusted figures released Tuesday show the industrial production index in October fell 2.3 per cent, the most since August, 1959, when there was a nationwide steel strike. The index is down 6.3 per cent from October, 1969.

Half of October's percentage decline was blamed on the auto workers' strike against General Motors and its depressing effect on industrial output. Tentative agreement has since been reached but GM is still struggling to resume production.

But, strike or no strike, the drop in the important economic indicator still would have been large, the Federal Reserve Board said.

It was the third straight monthly decline in the index, a disappointment to administration officials who have been trying to carry out a strategy of gradual economic recovery.

NOT SURPRISING

A spokesman for President Nixon's Council of economic advisers said the decline was a "negative" development but not surprising in view of the auto strike.

But the Federal Reserve Board said it blamed "further curtailments in output on consumer durable goods other than autos, business and defence equipment and industrial materials."

Industries produced more television sets in October but output of most other household goods declined, the board said.

ENLIGHTENED PARTNERSHIP

Aerospace Industry Seeks Aid

By FRANK GRAY

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of aviation specialists said Tuesday that some form of government involvement is needed to help the sagging Canadian aerospace industry.

David Mundy, president of the Air Industries Association of Canada, said that this involvement might take the form of an "enlightened partnership between government and industry to develop a formula for sustained and balanced growth."

"We haven't established this rapport yet here, unlike some European countries which have found a basis for creative interplay between government and industry," he said in a panel discussion at the annual Canadian Aeronautics and Space Congress meeting.

One kind of government help could be in marketing.

"For example, a small country wants to buy one of our planes but in turn wants a market for some of its wines," he said: "Then the Canadian government should get in touch with its liquor boards to see that those wines are imported."

The group generally agreed that Canada was not alone with its aerospace industry problems. Other countries were suffering and one big reason was cited as the Vietnam war in which massive U.S. defence spending was depriving the industry of research and development money usually available in times of relative peace.

There also was general agreement on the need to specialize. Dudley Taylor, president of Aviation Electric Ltd., said he hoped this would take the form of government leadership "to help stimulate a national STOL program."

The STOL—or short-takeoff-and-landing aircraft—would operate between heavily-populated city centres. Canada is seen as a leader in this as-yet undefined field with planes under development by Canadair Ltd. in Montreal and de Havilland of Toronto.

GIVES WARNING

The Science Council of Canada has prepared a study recommending that government, industry and the universities combine to develop such aircraft and the associated ground installations.

J.-L. Harrison, an air division chief in the department of industry, trade and commerce, cautioned that it would be unwise to rely too heavily on specialization since other countries would eventually develop their own competitive goods.

Mr. Harrison said that Canada's aerospace-producing capabilities lie in export since it is primarily a producer of airplane components. With this in mind, "we must look at forming an alliance with a good foreign market."

The obvious choice appeared to be the U.S. which accounted for 88 per cent of world sales of aeronautical products in 1967 compared with two per cent by Canada.

This was why it was important for Canada, whose industry was basically foreign-owned, to maintain good relations with parent companies so as not to suffer a deterioration in its output ability.

Double Agent Exposed Plot

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A Soviet double agent saved Second World War leaders Joseph Stalin, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill from assassination in Tehran, Iran, in 1943, says a book published here.

The book, Chekists, praising Soviet secret agents, relates how Soviet fighter planes shot down a planeload of German assassins and arms on the way to Tehran to kill the three leaders during their Tehran conference.

The book says agent Ilya Svetlov was chosen by the Nazi security service to organize the Tehran plot and sent word secretly to Moscow before going to Tehran himself disguised as a Swiss businessman.

Soviet fighter planes were ordered up to meet the Nazi plane near the meeting point of the Turkish, Iranian and Soviet frontiers. After refusing to land, it was shot down and an arsenal of weapons including a mortar was later found in the wreckage.

The Nazi plot against the Tehran conference was known earlier. The book, published several months ago, claims to give the first details of how the plot was foiled.

'Something Sour'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Something has "gone sour in education" and it may be because the majority of school trustees are middle-aged, says L. A. Riederer, an administrator with the Saskatchewan education department.

Riederer, a guest speaker at the annual Manitoba Association of School Trustees' convention here this week, said in an interview Tuesday 79.9 per cent of the provincial trustees in Saskatchewan were 41 years or over.

Sale Protested

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal government should take steps to "repatriate" the Canadian publishing industry, the Edmonton branch of the Canadian Women's Press Club said Tuesday.

In a letter to Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, the club protested the sale of Ryerson Press to an American publishing company this week and said the American domination of Canadian publishing is "a situation that can no longer be tolerated."

Price War Suspect

WINNIPEG (CP) Consumer Affairs Minister Ben Hanuschak said Tuesday he will start an investigation into the so-called supermarket price war in the city to find out "how real this price war is." He said he is watching advertising by three major food chains to see whether there actually is a saving to the consumer.

Diversity Urged

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher said Tuesday Saskatchewan farmers should not be persuaded by the improved grain sales outlook to get out of livestock production. "It makes sense to continue our program of diversification and to encourage a more balanced production pattern in our agricultural industry," he told the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool.

Metis Not Notified

WINNIPEG (CP) — Angus Spence, president of the Manitoba Metis Federation, said Tuesday his organization is divorcing itself from charges of discrimination brought against a downtown Winnipeg hotel by the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood.

Spence said in an interview that the organization has decided "not to get dragged into this thing" because it was never officially notified of the charges by the brotherhood against the hotel, the Marlborough.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

NEW SHAPE PROTESTED

EDMONTON (CP) — Gordon Taylor, highways and transport minister, said Tuesday he is not pleased with plans to introduce a different shape of beer bottle in Alberta next week.

"Alberta needs a different shaped beer bottle like Canada needs the FLQ," he said in an interview.

He was commenting on an announcement by Canadian Breweries — Carlings — that they would introduce a new type of beer in a newly-designed bottle with a neck slightly longer than the bottles presently used.

Taylor said he regrets the decision because the current bottles are interchangeable.

Police Court

A 19-year-old man who "foolishly" went for a ride in a stolen car pleaded guilty to theft over $50 Tuesday in provincial court.

Gregory Laronde, of Beddis Road, Salt Spring Island, told Judge William Ostler he did not know that the "buddy" he got involved with was an accomplished car thief.

He said he later learned that the man is facing four more charges of car theft.

The judge said it was foolish to get a criminal record for a ride in a car.

"You'd be better off to walk, at your age, than to get a criminal record," he said.

He released Laronde on his own recognizance and ordered a presentence report for Nov. 27.

The crown entered a stay of proceedings in the case of John Cooper, 26, of no fixed address, scheduled to go on trial Tusday for possession of heroin, prossession of marijuana and possession of LSD.

Albert Schell, 49, of 1608 Quadra, was fined $350 when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

He was arrested at 1:30 a.m. Tuesday when police who stopped a car discovered a plastic bag with a green plantlike substance between his feet in the back seat.

★ ★ ★

One man was remanded for trial and another for sentence when one pleaded guilty and the other not guilty on joint charge of shoplifting at the Bay.

Joseph Eror, 33, and Gerard Langis, 40, both of Vancouver, were jointly charged with shoplifting $36.63 in merchandise from the store Monday.

Langis pleaded guilty. Eror, who said he had nothing on him when arrested, pleaded not guilty.

Langis was just released from jail Oct. 23, court was told, and had an extensive record for similar offences.

A man who thought red lights were green ones, shot through intersections at 50 m.p.h. and failed to notice the red lights or hear the siren of a pursuing police car was fined $50 for careless driving.

Robert Dupont, 21, of CFB Esquimalt, told arresting officers he was in a hurry to get to the liquor store.

"You must have had an overpowering thirst to drive that way," Ostler said.

Harold Pearce, 28, of 68 Government Street, received a suspended sentence and six months probation when he pleaded guilty to common assault.

He told court he lost his temper and struick a 10-year-old boy who had been bullying and "beating up" his own 10-year-old son.

Pearce said he knew it was wrong to strike the other child but that his son was continually being bullied, picked on and harassed during and after school because he is an Indian child.

He said his emotion finally got the better of him.

Ostler did not impose a fine or a jail sentence when he learned Pearce was head of a household of seven children.

The judge said that under some circumstances it might be better to let two 10-year-old boys fight it out between themselves than to intervene.

"You abuse the hospitality of this country and this city," he said.

Spill Research Fund Doubled

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Petroleum Institute has doubled the amount of money it plans to spend on research to determine the best means for cleaning up oil spills.

Directors of the largest U.S. oil trade group have earmarked $1.3 million of a $3.5 million 1971 environmental control budget for oil spill research. The 1970 budget included only 1,650,000.

Frank Ikard, president, made the announcement Tuesday without reference to major oil spills off the California and Louisiana coasts that caused federal officials to strengthen offshore drilling regulations and delay new federal offshore lease sales.

Russian Relations 'Thawing'

By ALAN THOMAS

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Although Muscovites are preparing for another cold Russian winter, there are clear signs on the international political front of a thaw in relations between the Kremlin and Western Europe.

A non-aggression pact signed by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt in Moscow in August might well prove to be an historic turning point in relations between these two powers.

And the visit here in October of President Georges Pompidou of France, who was given a red carpet welcome, set the stage for closer Franco-Soviet political contacts.

●

Both Pompidou and the Soviet Communist party leader, Leonid Brezhnev, had reason to be pleased with the result of the French president's eight-day visit.

An agreement they reached for their foreign ministers to hold regular consultations was a major step forward.

There is so far no spectacular development in relations between the Soviet Union and Britain, but the groundwork for a possible new rapprochement was laid with a visit to Britain at the end of October by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The Soviet foreign minister invited both Prime Minister Edward Heath and Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home to make official visits to the Soviet Union.

Both accepted the invitation, but no date was set for the Moscow visit. The last visit by a British prime minister to the Soviet Union was by Harold Wilson in 1968. Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin went to Britain in February, 1967.

Since then, the Soviet-led Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in the summer of 1968 cast a cloud over Anglo-Soviet relations and further widened the political gap between the Kremlin and the United States.

●

The important thing now is that the contacts between the Soviet government and France, Britain and West Germany have definitely lowered the political temperature in Europe.

The signature of the Soviet-West German treaty will probably rank as one of the major Soviet diplomatic moves of 1970.

Brandt declared that the treaty marked the birth of an element of detente in Europe. Britain and Russia, in a joint statement issued after Gromyko's talks with Heath and Sir Alex, said the pact constituted a "significant contribution to the relaxation of tension in Europe."

They expressed the hope that before long, a similar assessment could be made of the outcome of talks on the Berlin problem between the ambassadors of the big powers—Britain, France and U.S. and the Soviet Union.

●

Brezhnev himself, in a speech in Soviet Kazakhstan last August, said the Moscow-Bonn treaty renouncing the use of force was a result of efforts by the Soviet Union and its allies aimed at "liquidating the remnants of the Second World War."

Comes Out of the Shadow of His Wife

By BOB THOMAS

Whatever the frame of reference, there are decided similarities between the two actors. Both are 32 years old, Jewish and from New York; both were late bloomers as performers, languishing for years in the shadows of their famous wives.

Both are moving from one starring role to another in the movie world, which five or 10 years ago would have relegated them to roles as the comedic friend of the handsome hero.

Gould's saga is well-known: the offbeat man-against-the-system who MASHed his way to fame after being known as Mr. Barbra Streisand.

Benjamin now is making his own splash. The onetime Mr. Paula Prentiss—but unlike Gould, not separated from his famous spouse—he scored as the Philip Roth hero in Goodbye, Columbus. His current film is Diary of a Mad Housewife, in which he plays the insensitive go-getting husband.

Coming up for Benjamin: an escapist husband in The Steagle, and the misfit husband of the The Marriage of a Young Stockbroker.

Benjamin, a tall, well-groomed, articulate actor, was working on location in a Beverly Hills brokerage office recently on the latter one, a 20th Century-Fox film produced and directed by Lawrence Turman. During a lunch break, he talked frankly in an interview about his similarities to Elliott Gould.

"It's true that Elliott and I are somewhat alike," he remarked. "We both were lucky to come along at a time when the movies were willing to accept real guys, not the normal kind of leading man of the past.

"But our styles are different. Elliott seems to like the roundabout way of approaching a character. Me, I prefer the direct approach; I like a clean line from here to there."

Born and schooled in New York City, Richard Benjamin came out of the Northwestern University drama department which produced such performers as Charlton Heston, Patricia Neal, Ralph Meeker and a San Antonio girl named Paula Prentiss, a classmate who became Mrs. Benjamin.

She was plucked right out of Northwestern for an MGM contract and starring roles in Follow the Boys, Where the Boys Are and other brainless films.

His career made a turn when he tried out for Mike Nichols for the road company of Barefoot in the Park. Nichols signed him for a year's tour.

Benjamin toured in The Odd Couple with Dan Dailey, then played another Neil Simon play on Broadway, Star Spangled Girl. He and Paula starred in the much-acclaimed but soon-cancelled television series, He and She. He came into his own with Goodbye, Columbus.

Working Women On Rise

By ELIZABETH FORBES

An amazing change in the over-all picture of Canada's labor force in the past two decades has been the increasing involvement of married women in paid work outside their homes. As far back as 1941 the federal department of labor women's bureau released figures to show only one married woman in 20 was so employed; 10 years later it listed more than one in 10 had a job.

Forbes

This proportion was doubled by 1961 and has continued to grow until now (according to recent figures released by the bureau) there were 2.5 million women employed in Canada in 1969 and 56 per cent of these were married. That's an increase of 12 per cent since 1959.

It's a strange thing but public feeling on the subject of working mothers continues strongly divided in Canada. Although the figures show they are entering the labor force in ever-increasing numbers, there is still widespread reluctance to take up the question of substitute care for their children with any degree of unanimity.

★ ★ ★

Fear is expressed that better day-care facilities might encourage more women to seek employment — which no doubt it would. Meanwhile working mothers are often uneasy about their children, and their work suffers in consequence.

At the same time in many communities there are strong evidences of inadequate care.

Right now substitute care for the children of these working mothers is highly personal. Parents make their own plans which tend to follow one of two patterns:

● Privately arranged care when children are left with relatives, friends, neighbors, a residential or daily home help, a baby sitter or someone whom the parents have located through a newspaper advertisement as willing to provide day care in her own home.

● Organized group care for pre-scholars in day nurseries or foster day care homes. Several provincial governments including British Columbia now offer some subsidized day care programs to help low-income and one-parent families in this age group. And for school boys and girls up to around the age of 10, there are certain activities before and after school, plus, in some instances, a school lunch program.

A sympathetic understanding of the problem, and responsible action toward its solution has become urgent. So much so that national women's organizations are taking the matter up with increasing determination and through briefs and resolutions are urging the federal government to look seriously at the need.

This weekend at the policy convention of the Liberal Party of Canada in Ottawa, a resolution on day care, passed at the Lower Island regional Liberal conference in Victoria, will be debated at one of several policy forums.

It askes that the federal government implement a day-care and after-school program which will foster the development of healthy children.

It points out that in many Canadian households today it is economically necessary that the mother supplement the family income by being employed either part time or on a permanent basis. That this often creates a situation in which mothers find it difficult to cope. And when this happens there is more than an even chance of children being neglected, ill-cared for and sometimes deprived.

Also that many working mothers have low paying jobs; so it is economically not feasible for them to pay the going rate for adequate private care.

With all this in mind, and in the sure knowledge that the percentage of mothers who must work will continue to rise it is easy to understand that it is necessary to ease the burden for women caught in an economic trap which is beyond their control.

At the same time it is perhaps more important that the needs of the children of these mothers is met.

A well-planned and comprehensive day-care program is desperately needed — on the one hand to give working mothers the assurance their children are in proper care and on the other to ensure the development of healthy future citizens.

IN MANDARIN

'Ma' Is 'Mother' But Also 'Horse'

By Jack Scott

They aren't exactly smashing down the doors to get to Mr. Hsiao's classes, you understand, but now that we've come around to formal recognition of China there'll be all sorts of Canadian businessmen and diplomats in need of a language in the compatible causes of profits and peace. The queues may start forming at any moment.

It bodes ill, one might say, for Harry Hsiao who is 34, Formosa-born, just arrived here from six years at Harvard to teach Chinese at the University of Victoria. You could search far and wide without finding a more likeable man, but Mr. Hsiao's subject could so easily drive any Occidental student toward the brink of fury or madness that killing the teacher might seem the only way out.

Scott

Just learning how to pronounce Mr. Hsiao's name may take the better part of a morning. In the Mandarin language, you see, an "h" is silent when followed by an "s" and an "s", properly pronounced, sounds somewhat like a swarm of angry bees.

It is just one of the many facts that may raise some east-west communication problems more impenetrable than mere ideological differences.

Mandarin is the required language for two reasons. One reason is that half a billion Chinese speak it, give or take a million. The other is that the People's Republic is determined, in the cause of national unity, that it will be the official, common tongue throughout that vast land.

Since there's a bewildering variety of provincial dialects it makes our own bilingual difficulties seem relatively light. What's more, the aim is to teach the pure Peking dialect—rather like Parisian French is to less cultured forms—so that even people who do speak Mandarin are often caught up in that most arbitrary of disciplines, rejecting what they've learned on their mother's knees.

The dilemma may be seen in the fact that more than half the 20 students in Mr. Hsiao's first class are Canadian-born Chinese whose ancestors came originally from the southern provinces of Kwantung and Kwangsi. Mandarin, to them, is truly a foreign language.

Having once had a go at learning Cantonese I can sympathize with them. To count to 10 in Canton, using the most elementary phonetics, you would say "yut, yee, sum, see, ng, loke, chut, bart, gow, sup." To count to 10 in the Peking dialect you would say, "Yee, er, san, si, wu, liou, chi, ba, jo, sh." Even then, without a complete course in the phonetic code nobody in Peking would know what in the world you were talking about and might just bring you a plate of barbecued duck.

The difficulty is compounded for the Occidental, from the very outset, by the fact that he must learn to use his lips, tongue, teeth, throat and nose in an entirely new sound-producing mechanism.

It's small comfort, perhaps, but this is a problem that works in reverse. In all but a few Oriental dialects there's no sound for our "v" or "r", which aren't in the Mandarin language, and so the purely physical necessity of learning how to produce a new noise—much less a new word—becomes square one. This explains why most Orientals, called upon to say "ripe on the vine" (though they may not be called upon to say it often) will make it "lipe on the wine."

★ ★ ★

The late Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond and a man absolutely terrified of flying, had a memorable experience with this once when, boarding a Japan Air Lines plane for a flight to Tokyo, he was welcomed aboard by the lovely stewardess with: "Ah, Mr. Freming — have a good fright!"

Perhaps the fundamental difference between English and Mandarin is that the Chinese language requires the use of tones to establish meaning. It is this that causes what we choose to call the "sing song" characteristic of Chinese speech, a thing that we sometimes find almost as hilarious as the Chinese find our monotonous, non-melodic drone.

The tonal system is not to be confused, Mr. Hsiao points out, with expression as we use it in English. There are said to be 98 different ways of saying "yes" in English — angrily, soothingly, inquiringly, endearingly, doubtfully and so on. It is still "yes." Not so in Mandarin, in which the four basic tones create four totally different words. Some teachers (though not Mr. Hsiao) actually have their students tune up at a piano, a further complication if the students happen to be tone-deaf.

I see that you're yawning and scratching, so we'll limit this to one brief, simple example. Take the Mandarin word "ma." Now, if you say "mā" in one tone it means "mother." If your voice rises rapidly from the mid-range to the top of your range, it means "hemp." If it dips to the low range and rises to the mid-range it means "horse." If it starts near the top of the range and falls rapidly to the bottom it means "scold." Give up?

Obviously a language so tricky that you might inadvertently call your wife's mother a horse must be treated with extreme caution even though it has been understood longer and by more people than any other in the world.

The actual writing of Mandarin is so much more intimidating than merely speaking it that Mr. Hsiao doesn't even mention it in the first year of his course. True, some Chinese characters look vaguely like the word they represent ("tree" looks like a tree), but in 3500 years of evolution this pictograph method has become so refined that nowadays only the scholars are aware of the derivations. Taking just the sound of my first name, for example, Mr. Hsiao wrote down the characters which come out as "hero" and "overcome," a thing I will be happy to explain to you anytime tomorrow between three and four o'clock.

Like every Oriental language, Mandarin is wonderfully courteous — your home is "grand palace" and my home is "humble nest", your name is "honorable name" while my name is "humble name" — and, to give Mr. Hsiao the final word, it probably really isn't that much more difficult than English itself.

"After all," said Mr. Hsiao impishly, "what could be more difficult than a language like English in which fish may be spelled 'ghoti'? 'Gh' as in tough, 'o' as in women, 'ti' as in nation. It spells fish, yes?

Which was, you might say, one up for honorable teacher over humble student.

Water Drive Pays

A total of 3,320,000 gallons of water was saved last week for the spawning salmon at Goldstream through the voluntary efforts of citizens.

Greater Victoria Water Board commissioner Ron Upward said today the average consumption of water for this time of the year is 109,300,000 gallons a week.

But last week it dropped to 105,980,000 gallons.

Upward said water is still being pumped from Council Creek through a new tunnel to help swell Goldstream.

"The problem will be solved if we get another six inches of rain. It doesn't take long to fill up the lakes once the ground has absorbed all the water it can take."

POLLUTION, POLICY LACK KILL FISH

Sooke Watershed Creeks 'Doomed'

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A large salmon run in five waterways, including the Sooke River, will be wiped out unless conservation measures are taken soon.

This warning was sounded today by fisheries officials, conservationists and biologists.

Federal fisheries guardian Jack Brooks of Sooke said several creeks in 15 to 20 years will be reduced to the same state as Colquitz and Bowker in Greater Victoria.

They will be polluted and in summer bone dry.

"The creeks could be saved under a water resource conservation program," he said. "But as things are going now most creeks are doomed."

At stake is a salmon spawning stock which runs as high as 80,000 during peak years, capable of producing 480 million fry.

Under proper management the spawning stock could be tripled.

The waterways involved are the Sooke River, Stoney, Tugwell, Muir and Kirby Creeks.

Citizen groups are so concerned with the growing environmental problem at Sooke and Goldstream they have called a meeting for next Tuesday.

The meeting sponsored by the Victoria branch, Community Planning Association of Canada, will be held at 8 p.m. in the board room of the Capital Regional District, 26 Bastion Square.

Howard English, president of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, appealed to residents for support in getting senior governments, to act on conservation measures.

"If no conservations measures are taken to save these creeks, we eventually not only lose fish, but fresh water and esthetic assets," he said. "In other words we will waste three resources."

The problems vary from creek to creek. In the case of Tugwell, Kirby and Muir, logging practices have affected the run-off and water temperatures. But of immediate concern are the Sooke River, De Mamiel and Stoney Creeks.

Lack of co-ordination between the federal fisheries department, the provincial water rights department, and the department of municipal affairs is slowly depriving the creeks of water, conservationists say.

Water Stored For Salmon Usurped For Home Use

De Mamiel with its headwaters in the Sooke Hills and emptying into the Sooke River near the entrance to Sooke Park, is a good example. This is an important salmon producing stream.

The federal fisheries department over the years has taken steps to preserve water for fish by building temporary dams. (Last year a concrete one was built near Young's Lake)

At the same time the water rights department has been issuing more and more water licences for domestic use without regard for the minimum flow of water, conservationists say.

So the water which is being stored for fish is being used for domestic purposes.

And now the fisheries department is considering a plan to build more dams, but conservationists are wondering if they will be of any use because there is now a possibility of subdivisions north of Young Lake.

A senior water rights official said that under the Water Act he has no alternative but to issue water licences for domestic use.

David Anderson, MP for Saanich-Esquimalt, also chairman of the Commons environmental and renewable resources committee, says Canada is behind Britain, Sweden, Germany and other European countries in providing regulations to protect streams.

"In Switzerland, a very capitalist country, a property owner can't even cut down a tree by a stream without special permission," he said.

"Here, because of the lack of planning, we destroy our natural resources and sometimes spend millions to renew what we have destroyed and could have saved."

The answer, conservationists say is for the government to permit the regional district to undertake conservation programs for the preservation of natural environment.

This is done in Ontario where muncipalities, the provincial and federal governments provide grants or funds for the preservation of water and natural environment.

The only conservation measures the B.C. government has taken so far are large-scale projects in relatively remote areas.

Pat Bay Section Nearly Done

Highway crews hope to complete the section of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes between Island View Road and Sidney before bad weather sets in, an official said today.

Northern section would be widened to four lanes in spring or as soon as weather is suitable, said the highways department official.

Commenting on complaints at Central Saanich council this week about that stretch of the highway, the official admitted there are problems because traffic must be switched as road work progresses.

White lines couldn't be put down because they would have to be constantly erased and this is difficult.

Flagmen have been posted with personnel present in the evenings, at least until the last ferry, he said. The problem was not so great in daytime when crews are at work and drivers can see better.

One of the main problems, he said, is that motorists won't slow down in construction zone areas.

The connection to the airport is not completed but it will be in three weeks—if there are five days of paving weather. In the meantime, the detour continues.

The highways department official said work at the Royal Oak section is going well but won't be really completed until spring or summer.

The work will be completed gradually and as it is, new sections will come into use. The new freeway section near Quadra should be in use in about two weeks.

Further north, a traffic light system has been installed at Mount Newton Cross Road and should be in operation soon.

Traffic Called Region Task

Regional chairman Hugh Curtis said today the region's staff is the only body competent to handle transportation studies of the kind suggested Tuesday by Victoria city council.

Curtis said the city's proposed plan would be a "duplication" of what the regional district is at present carrying out.

The statement came following an offer by Victoria to pool its traffic engineering facilities with those of the province to see what kind of transportation and land use study would best serve the needs of the whole region.

A statement from Curtis said the regional district "has been involved in regional planning for the last 10 months.

"Despite this short period it has reviewed the previous work of the Capital Regional Planning Board and puts high priority on the need to bring forward a new regional plan.

"A current report received at the last committee meeting strongly recommends that the region not fall into the pitfall of studying transportation in isolation. The approach, the mistake of the 50s, and early 60s in many North American centres, ignores the fact that transportation must be related to the form desired for the city and region.

"The board in the first half of 1971 will be considering and putting to the public alternative concepts for the future of this region, these in turn will involve alternative transportation systems."

The statement said it is hoped that the city of Victoria as well as the other municipalities and provincial government will co-operate in these studies.

SIDNEY WOMAN KILLED

A middle-aged Sidney woman was killed this morning in a two-car collision at Mills and MacDonald Park Roads.

RCMP withheld the name of the victim. The name of the other driver was not available. The two women drivers were the only occupants of the cars. Police said the other driver was not injured.

The accident took place about 7 a.m. at the intersection on the western edge of Sidney. Police said one car struck the other broadside.

Voluntary Arbitration 'Should Bind'

Victoria lawyer E. E. Pearlman today proposed a change in labor legislation which would permit voluntary arbitration boards to impose binding contract settlements.

And he called for an end to the "adversary approach" in contract negotiations which he blamed as the cause of most failures to reach settlements.

Pearlman was elaborating on remarks he made Tuesday night at a meeting of the Administrative Management Society.

He said voluntary arbitration boards are possible under existing laws, but their judgments are not binding. Pearlman proposed legislative changes permitting an option for voluntary board decisions to be binding.

In cases where both parties decided not to seek a binding decision, and refused the voluntary board's ruling, government should settle the dispute.

This could be done under existing provisions of the Mediation Commission Act or through some other government body, he said.

Pearlman criticized the negative position which the B.C. Federation of Labor has taken toward the act. He said provincial labor laws give the advantage to labor, not management.

But he said neither side should feel existing laws are unfair.

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said Pearlman has "a very unrealistic view of collective bargaining."

His suggestions, Ryan said, are "diametrically opposed to recommendations of the 1968 report of the Woods Task Force on labor relations."

He said Pearlman's labor-management views are further to the right than Premier Bennett's.

BUILD TRUST

Pearlman said labor and management should meet throughout the year, not just at bargaining time. Increased communication would help build the trust necessary for bargaining in good faith.

Ryan said labor has no objection to suggestions for improved labor-management relations. But Pearlman's pro-management views, he said, disqualify him as a labor relations expert.

Arthur Mayse . . .

EDWARD M. WILSON IS A school teacher now employed at Duncan. V. N. R. Sewell turned from teaching to other pursuits in 1967. But for a number of years, both taught at S. J. Willis junior secondary. While so engaged, they shared a conviction that the boy or girl with questions to ask about sex deserves an honest answer.

So they decided to collaborate on a sex guide with a difference. It would be direct, comprehensive and explicit, and they would write it in a language that a junior high kid would understand.

Last December, Sewell and Wilson gave the final licks to their sketch-illustrated manuscript. They banged off one copy to a Toronto publishing house and another to a publisher in New York.

About two weeks later, a note arrived from the Canadian publisher. Their submission had been received, but a verdict wouldn't be forthcoming for at least eight weeks.

A couple of days later, Macfadden-Bartell of New York got in touch. Their book had been accepted. It would be brought out in paperback, for a guaranteed minimum of 100,000 copies. Advance offered on royalties was $2,000.

While Norman Sewell filled me in on the project, I leafed through the book. It's breezily titled, Let's Tell It Like It Is. Sub-title is "A sex guide for young adults."

As the authors intended it to do, it deals with all aspects of sex clearly, matter-of-factly, and without the slightest trace of moralizing.

"We wrote our book mostly because we were disappointed with sex education in Victoria," Sewell told me. "It was, let's say, Victorian — and it still is. We intended to answer the questions that get asked at school, but don't receive explicit replies."

And that, they felt was a pity. In their experience, they've found the student at junior secondary level highly sensible in his attitude to sex education.

"No giggling," Sewell said. "They're serious in approach, and eager to learn."

The book came out in the United States earlier this year. Sewell has heard that some copies are now on Victoria stands, but he hasn't so far seen any.

My own reaction to the book is mixed. Even though the sexual revolution is once more proclaimed on its back cover, I'm by no means sure that sex can be divorced from morality all that easily. And in spite of co-author Sewell's assurance, I doubt that every child of junior high school age is emotionally equipped to absorb total sex instruction without guidance and at a gulp.

This, of course, may be merely my generation gap showing. Certainly, the Wilson-Sewell treatment is an infinite improvement over formal sex education as I received it.

In the shape of a tract, that is, thrust into my hand by an embarrassed adult, who promptly fled the scene. Nothing was explained. That wasn't the idea. The intent, in fact, was to scare the devil out of any curious-minded sprout who might read it.

A FISHING TYPE EMployed in printing biz tells me that he has a chore to be looked after next weekend. This, he insists, is to knock a hole in the bottom of his utility boat so its cargo of salt water can run out.

He picked up the water last Sunday morning in the course of a journey that he will not soon forget.

As he tells the story, he was fishing for winter springs off Strongtide Island at the top end of the Chatham group when a puff or two of breeze rippled the saltchuck. Then, with no further warning, the wind began to blow hard from the southeast.

By the time our guy had his lines in, a brisk chop was making.

He headed for home, but the wind ran faster. Before he was halfway across Baynes Channel mouth, the whitecaps of a mean and untidy sea were giving his boat a beating. A crest exploded against the bows and tossed water inboard.

The crossing at that point became a struggle for survival. A less handy boatman mightn't have made it. As it was, he nursed his craft into Telegraph Cove with enough water sloshing in it to swim a salmon.

Since he's a keen fisherman, I expect he will change his mind about whacking a hole in his boat. But as he freely admits, he never had or expects to have a closer call.

FRAZIER DEFENDS TITLE TONIGHT

Yancey's the Boss

DETROIT (AP) —Yancey (Yank) Durham is the only man alive who can belt the heavyweight champion of the world in the belly with a 12-pound ball and walk away with his teeth intact.

He also can call him a "sucker" and a "stupid fighter" and get away with it.

"He's a great guy—he just says, 'Okay, Yank, you're the boss'," Yancey said Tuesday in explaining the rare relationship he has with Joe Frazier, the bearded monster of a man who defends his heavyweight title tonight against Bob Foster.

Technically, Yancey, 48, is Frazier's trainer, but he has become more than that.

He is the champion's doting mother hen—counsellor, dietician, doctor, security guard, spokesman and pal.

They have been inseparable since Frazier walked into Yancey's 23rd PAL gym in Philadelphia as a big, gawky kid of 17 and put himself under the veteran trainer's wing.

"I don't want that stuff," says Frazier, grimacing.

"Take it," orders Durham.

"That's enough," says Frazier.

"Seven more," says Yank. He pounds away until he has belted the champ 20 times. The punishment would kill a horse.

Durham said he and his man have an understanding during the heat of battle.

"When I give him some advice or tell him what he's doing wrong, he listens," Durham said. "Sometimes he may not hear me over the din. He'll ask me to repeat it.

"But he always replies, 'I gotcha.' He never talks back. He's some man. We can lick the world."

Wings Clip Vancouver; Stars Defeat St. Louis

By The Canadian Press

Five was the big winner in National Hockey League games Tuesday night, but Montreal Canadiens had other reasons for rejoicing.

The Canadiens drubbed California's Golden Seals 5-1 to move into first place in the NHL's East Division with 21 points, one ahead of Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, both of whom were idle Tuesday.

The game also marked the return to the Montreal lineup of left winger John Ferguson, who discarded retirement plans, and sharp-shooting Yvan Cournoyer, sidelined for three weeks with a cracked foot bone.

But the real sparkplug in the Montreal attack was veteran Henri Richard. Skating like a rookie, the 34-year-old centre scored twice and assisted on two others. His effort was supplemented by Pete Mahovlich's two goals.

BLUES LOSE

In other games, Minnesota North Stars dumped St. Louis Blues 5-3 in St. Louis and Detroit Red Wings defeated Vancouver Canucks 5-2.

Ferguson, who retired Oct. 7 because of pressures of business outside hockey, decided to return last Friday.

Cournoyer had scored 10 goals in nine games before his injury. He played a regular shift but Ferguson, the club's policeman, was used sparingly and did not get involved in any of the three fights later in the game.

Centres Jude Drouin and Tom Williams scored in the second period to snap a 2-2 tie and ignite the Minnesota victory, snapping St. Louis' home-ice winning streak at seven games. Danny O'Shea got the insurance goal with three minutes left in the game with a 40-footer that eluded Blues' goaltender Glenn Hall.

Two unanswered goals in the second period sent Detroit winging to victory at Vancouver. The goals, by Tom Webster and Billy Dea, gave the Red Wings a 4-1 lead.

Veteran centre Alex Delvecchio got a goal and assist to join three other players with 20 points, second only to Bruins' Phil Esposito, who has 25.

The win moved Detroit to within two points of the Canucks, fourth in the East Division with 15 points.

Brown Retains Grapple Crown

Bulldog Brown retained what was billed as the Pacific Coast wrestling championships when challenger Don Leo Jonathan was disqualified in the feature bout of a professional card Tuesday night at Memorial Arean.

BILL WALKER

During the recent Sandown racing meeting there was an incident in Ontario that didn't receive the attention it probably deserved. Four thoroughbred race horses were reportedly injected with a tranquilizer drug at Old Greenback Downs. Not only that, but at Hazel Park, Mich., a few days later, a race was cancelled because three horses had been tranquilized.

Now this is a new twist to the old story that "the fix is on." But it is designed to produce the same end rult, for the gambler. It cuts down the odds in his favor for a horse which he expects to win. In other words, the race would be rigged. Some horses, having been tranquilized, would run slower than the rest.

Previously, the usual method of attempting to successfully pre-determine the result of a race was to give a certain horse special assistance, by injecting it with a drug that it would help it run faster, and without pain. In this method, a good horse suddenly becomes a much better horse, and should win. The financial gains, in this case would be to the favored few, who were in the know.

As it was, in Ontario the track vet was too smart for the dopers. He noticed that some of the horses in thepaddock were listless, that their eyes were glazed, and he ordered them out of the race. Subsequent urine tests revealed that only three of the horses turned up "positive." However, this was not considered significant as on some horses, it takes three or four tests to show up. That was the official explanation. The drug was identified as phenothiazine. Needle marks were found in the horses' necks.

Naturally, this brought up the subject of track protection, and how to prevent such mischief from taking place. Obviously there were few fears at Sandown. Stable security was non-existent. At Ex-Park, at Vancouver, it isn't that difficult to get by the guards, either.

Every track wished to be considered as running an honest game, and most do. It is not always the track's fault either, when something goes awry. The Kentucky derby is a case in a point. At Churchill Downs, the security is probably the best of all. And yet, in the Derby of 1968, the winning horse was disqualified. Dancer's Image, owned by Peter Fuller of Boston, who is still fighting the decision, and trained by Canada's Lou Cavalaris, won the race but lost it 48 hours later when traces of the pain-killer drug Butazolidin were found in the horse's urine.

Protests were in vain, and the decision stood, although the procedure used by Cavalaris was obviously in keeping with the rules. Had somebody got to the horse? No-one knows.

However, that is another story. The point is that although the winner of every race at Ex Park, and at Sandown, and other horses picked at random, are tested after each race, and the necessary action taken if the results are positive, there definitely is a need for more security in shedrow.

It's not that the problem is new. Because a national U.S. magazine, just a few weeks ago, came out with the disclosure that wholesale doping of horses now is the accepted plan of fixing a horse race. It's easier to slow up some horses, than to speed up the winner, and with less chance of being found out, too.

There also is the fact, as explained by one trainer, that it is no trick for anyone to purchase medication for an animal. Medication of any kind, that is. And it is no trick, either, to get to a particular horse in the stable area. This is especially so when a race is being run. The hired hands are often off, betting, or just watching, from the rail. The horse is unattended.

●

In the same regard, B.C. Jockey Club president Jack Diamond was making a point here recently when discussing the so-called secondary racing circuit in the province.

"If they don't test the horses after each race," he said, "Who is to say the horse didn't get some help? "In effect Diamond was asking full testing procedures for all racing meets in the province, not only the thoroughbreds at Ex-Park, and at Sandown but everywhere.

Which makes one wonder, doesn't it, what goes on in the bushes, or just how often horses have been doped, even, on recognized tracks in B.C., and the offence gone undetected?

Because, after all, it's the payoff that counts for the gambler even if it takes larceny to get the job dohe. That comes cheap.

Scrambling Lancaster Stamps' Greatest Fear

CALGARY (CP) — Defensive coach Dick Munroe says he has found a way to throttle the Saskatche-Roughrider offence and give Calgary Stampeders the opportunity tonight to win the Western Football Conference championship.

"You've got to keep Lancaster in the pocket. You let him scramble around and you're in trouble.

"This is where he's hurt us in the past. Our defensive ends have to be conscious of this all the time. . . . They've got to keep him in there."

The Calgary defensive unit demonstrated last Saturday they could keep Saskatchewan where Munroe wanted the Roughriders. The Stampeders took the first game of the best-of-three final 28-11 and held the vaunted Roughrider offence to 188 yards compared with 317 yards for Calgary.

ATTACHES NO BLAME

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys attached no blame for his team's showing in the opener and said Tuesday if they played as well tonight Calgary would be headed for defeat.

If Saskatchewan wins the game, which starts at 10 p.m. EST, a third game would be played Sunday in Regina. Tonight's game will be televised nationally by the CBC.

If anyone is able to come up with workable plans for stopping opposition offences, Munroe is the most likely.

He came to Calgary five years ago and when Jim Duncan became head coach at the start of the 1969 season, Munroe got full charge of the defensive unit.

He has since built the squad into one of the toughest in the country—giving up only 3,633 yards this season, by far the best in the league, and 209 points, only three more than the stingy Saskatchewan defence.

Nashville Players End Puck Walkout

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Striking members of Nashville Dixie Flyers of the Eastern Hockey League voted early today to end a walkout and return to the ice in Greensboro, N.C. tonight.

The game had been postponed by the Greensboro club after a contest scheduled in Charlotte, N.C. Tuesday night was cancelled because the players failed to show up.

The players' action brought an uneasy truce in a dispute which began Monday when players received pay cheques reflecting $70 fines imposed on all members of the team for poor performances in recent games.

Mark Parrish, Flyers general manager, had said earlier that any players who failed to show for the game in Charlotte would be suspended and "never play hockey again."

But a team spokesman said this morning all but two players will depart today for tonight's game in Greensboro.

WILL NEGOTIATE

Wally Sprange, centre who has acted as player representative in the dispute, and veteran defenceman Norman Ryder will be left behind to continue negotiations with club owners, the spokesman said.

In addition to the fines, the players said they were upset by what they called poor medical treatment, inferior equipment and the condition of the team's travel bus.

League president Tom Lockhart, who had been asked to help settle the dispute, suspended all of the players after the Charlotte game was cancelled.

Parrish said Tuesday night that the team would go out of business and season ticketholders' money would be refunded if the players continued the strike.

Details of the strike settlement were not available, but a spokesman said Sprange and Ryder will continue negotiations in an effort to iron out some of the player's complaints.

Labatts Finally Beaten

Hotel Douglas wore down the opposition Tuesday night to record a 54-46 victory over Labatts in a Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League game at Shoreline Junior High School.

Victory vaulted Hotel Douglas into a tie for first place with the previously-unbeaten Labs.

Hotelmen scored first and the clubs traded baskets continuously until just before the half. Seven straight points were then scored by Hotel Douglas to carve out a 32-24 halftime lead.

Labs grabbed the lead back with 10 straight points at the start of the second half. From then the teams stayed fairly close until Hotelmen outscored their rivals 8-1 in the last few minutes.

Racial Unrest Hits Hoop Squad

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State University basketball coach Sam Aubrey announced Tuesday the dismissal of four black players from the varsity squad for "failure to report to practice."

Although Aubrey said he knew nothing beyond the fact that each player missed two practices, the dismissals apparently were connected with racial unrest on the OSU campus in the last week.

Many black students boycotted classes Monday and Tuesday, and four leaders met Tuesday with Gov. Dewey Bartlett. They said white students were being allowed to have firearms on campus, and that black students feared for their lives.

Million in Prizes For Race Series

NEW YORK (AP) — The Sports Car Club of America announced a 10-race, $1 million Canadian-American Challenge Cup road racing series for 1971.

The series will open June 13 at Mosport Park, Ont., and end with the Grand Prix at Riverside, Calif. Oct. 31.

Drivers will be paid a minimum of $800,000, including an individual race purse of at least $75,000.

Victoria Squad to Start Against Favored Cubans

CARTAGENA, Colombia (CP) — Battle lines were drawn today for the world amateur baseball championships, with Holland meeting Venezuela today and the Canadian squad cooling its heels until Friday when it meets the favored Cubans.

"We don't mind starting against the best," said the coach of the Victoria Centennials, Bob Lumley. "That way we know where we stand."

The team, Canada's national champions augmented by players from across the country, will play five of its 11 scheduled matches in the single round-robin series at night—a fact which pleases Lumley. He expressed fears earlier that the sweltering, 90-degree weather would work against the Centennials, who had been working out indoors in Victoria prior to flying here last weekend.

The draw also gave the Canadian squad more time to become acclimatized.

Following the game with Cuba, the Centennials play Nicaragua, Guatemala, The Netherlands, Dutch Antilles, the United States and Colombia consecutively between Nov. 21 and 25.

Nov. 26 will be a free day with the team getting back into action on the 27th with games scheduled against the Dominican Republic, Italy, Venezuela, Holland and Puerto Rico.

The Canada-Cuba game will be played at Barranquilla, about 100 miles from here. It is one of four games Canada will play there.

Far from the invigorating climate of the West Coast in the fall, the Victoria Centennials worked out Monday and Tuesday in sweltering 90-degree temperatures and high humidity.

"The first couple of days are going to be rough regardless of who the starting pitcher is," said Lumley, who added he considers lefthander Larry Webster of Vancouver "my number one stopper."

Despite the weather, shortstop Tom McKenzie of Kitchener, Ont., one of two players on the team with previous world-competition experience, feels the team has a better chance than the squad Canada fielded for the 1967 Pan-American Games in Winnipeg. Canada finished fifth in those games.

NAMED TO EAST ALL-STARS

Seven Rookies Honored

By The Canadian Press

Seven first-year men — five from Montreal Alouettes and two from Ottawa Rough Riders — won positions on the 1970 Eastern Football Conference all-star team announced Tuesday.

The 24 players — 12 each on offence and defence — were picked by a vote of the Football Reporters of Canada.

The seven rookies are quarterback Gary Wood and defensive-back Al Marcelin of Ottawa, and running-back Moses Denson, offensive-tackle Ed George, defensive-ends Steve Smear and Steve Booras and outside-linebacker Mike Widger, all of Montreal.

In all, the Alouettes put eight men on the two squads, Toronto Argos and Hamilton Tiger-Cats six each and Ottawa four.

The quarterback category, in which retired Russ Jackson of Ottawa had taken every vote for four years in a row, went to Wood by a wide margin. He had 20 votes to eight for runner-up Wally Gabler of Hamilton, two for Tom Wilkinson of Toronto and one each for Joe Zuger of Hamilton and Sonny Wade of Montreal.

There was a completely new backfield from last year.

Bill Symons of Toronto won unanimous selection with Dave Fleming of Hamilton and Denson close to unanimous.

The teams:

OFFENSIVE

DEFENSIVE

Ten-Year Quest Ends in Success

Belmont Braves finally did it!

Braves opened the Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League season Tuesday with a 53-52 victory over host Oak Bay.

It was the first victory for Belmont over Oak Bay in 10 years of league competition.

Bays had a 13-point bulge at one point in the first half but their lead dwindled to 25-23 at the intermission.

Jim Dupiak paced Belmont with 18 points while Lee Edmondson added 15. Doug Walton had 13 points and Pete Gibson nine for Oak Bay.

Another league member, Reynolds, plays host to Mennonite Educational Institute in an exhibition contest tonight at 6:30.

Most of Uvic's teams will be on the road this weekend, with the basketball, field hockey, cross-country, and water polo teams competing out of town.

The varsity basketball squad opens its play in the rugged Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association league, Saturday, meeting the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon. On the following Monday Vikings will challenge Brandon University, in Brandon.

On Saturday they meet Vancouver City College, and the following day take on a Vancouver Junior Men's League team.

The cross-country team, led by Charlie Thorne, holder of the WCIAA 10,000 metre srown, will travel to Vancouver to compete in the Pacific Northwest championships on Saturday.

Both women's grass hockey teams, Valkries and Vagabonds, will be engaged in tournaments south of the border.

Valkries will be competing Saturday and Sunday in Eugene, Oregon, while the Vagabonds will be participating in a weekend tournament in Tacoma, Washington.

The water polo team will be in Seattle, Saturday, to play the University of Washington.

The hockey Vikings will get initiated itno the WCIAA, Friday night, when they meet Brandon University in the Esquimalt arena at 9:15. Saturday afternoon at 1:30 the Uvic squad will come up against one of the tougher university teams when they meet the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon club, at Esquimalt.

People who know the hockey scene say that the Vikings will probably be sorry they stayed in town this weekend. Said one: "They'll get bombed."

★ ★ ★

Soccer Vikings returned from Canada's first national collegiate soccer championships, Monday, classifed as third best. But it seems that they deserve a better rating than that.

In the crucial game of the tournament Vikings dropped a 2-1 decision to University of Loyola although they dominated play throughout.

Uvic controlled play, but found great difficulty in getting the ball in their opponent's net. That's not surprising, though, as Barry Moens, highest Viking scorer and most valuable player in the WCIAA tournament, was unable to play due to injuries.

An interesting sidelight to that game, which puts the Vikings all alone in first place, is that Dave Smirl — who was recently promoted from the Norsemen — came up with two tries. Perhaps a few more Norsemen should be moved up to the first team.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Solid series brought Norm Wylie back to winners' list in Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition for second straight season. Norm captured men's fivepin award in sixth week of eighth annual competition with 248-328-390—966 in B.C. Government League at Capital City Lanes. Weekly award also wins Norm a berth in Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs in May.

New Pro Golf League Lacks Players, Dates

NEW YORK (AP) — Formation of a golf league funded by 11 regional franchise owners for $6,600,000 the first year and intended to attract some of the top names in golf, was announced Tuesday by Charles R. L. White and Constantine Seredin of New York, the co-founders.

The International Professional Golf League (IPGL) which is slated to begin a schedule of 60 match-play events in the spring of 1971, consists of 11 regional franchises, whose owners have been committed to $600,000 each for the first year of operation.

White, commissioner pro tem, and Seredin, president, said each franchised team would consist of six players and two alternates.

None of the 88 players has been signed and none of the tourney sites in the franchises confirmed.

"We have talked with players," said Seredin, "but we couldn't do anything about signing them because we only became a league yesterday (Monday)."

The league, a non-profit organization, will be based in New York.

The league, as in pro baseball, football, basketball and hockey, plans to hire coaches, have annual drafts from the college ranks, pay salaries commenserate with ability, provide travel, retirement and health benefits, provide team uniforms, compile league standings and conduct a "world series" and an all-star game.

Joseph Dey, commissioner of the Professional Golfers Association, when asked for his reaction to the league, said:

Back Injury Bothers Als' Starry Halfback

MONTREAL (CP)—All-star halfback Moses Denson of the Montreal Alouettes underwent X-rays for a possible back injury Tuesday while the rest of his team-mates prepared for Saturday's final encounter with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Eastern Football Conference.

Denson, elected to the EFC's all-star team Tuesday by the Football Reporters of Canada, was told by team physician Dr. Ted Percy his injury is not serious.

"It's hard to get the proper sleep when you can't seem to get comfortable," he said.

There was no fear in the Alouettes' camp that Denson would be sidelined Saturday.

Offensive lineman Pierre Desjardins took things easy also, because of a groin injury suffered in the EFC semi-final in Toronto 10 days ago. He was recovering last week but re-activated the problem last Sunday in the Als 32-22 win over Hamilton.

DECISION RESERVED . . . . . IN SMYTHE CASE

Legal Stick-Handling Goes On

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Justice Dalton Wells of the Ontario Supreme Court Tuesday reserved decision on a Crown application asking him to order a trial for Stafford Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs Hockey Club president, on income tax evasion charges.

County Court Judge Joseph Kelly earlier quashed charges against Smythe of evading payment of taxes on income totalling $289,372 and filing false or misleading returns.

The trial judge ruled he had no jurisdiction to try the case.

Judge Kelly agreed with Smythe's lawyer, J. J. Robinette, that prosecution under the Income Tax Act violated the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Robinette repeated his argument Tuesday for Chief Justice Wells. He said the rights of the individual were violated when the justice minister had the arbitrary power to decide whether to proceed summarily or by indictment.

A summary conviction under the Income Tax Act carries as penalty a fine and a possible jail term of up to two years. By indictment a conviction carries a mandatory jail term of at least two months with a five year maximum, he said.

Mr. Chief Justice Wells said he was not satisfied the act does in fact insist upon a jail sentence.

He suggested that Robinette's argument would, if successful, threaten the validity of many Canadian statutes. The powers of attorneys-general were traditionally very flexible, he said. For example in the case of a killing the Crown decided whether the charge would be murder or manslaughter. The guide, he said, was the gravity of the offence.

"It was not the intention of Parliament to alter the whole system of Canadian law by passing the Bill of Rights," Chief Justice Wells told Robinette. "The criminal law is cluttered up now with objections along the line of Judge Kelly's judgment."

Pepin Raps U.S. Trade Bill in Rare Outside Attack

NEW YORK (CP) — Canadian Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, in an unusual attack by an outsider on a proposed American statute, said Tuesday the trade expansion bill now before Congress contains "dangerously protectionist elements" and lacks a positive thrust.

Addressing the national foreign trade convention in New York, Pepin warned against a tendency to seal trade into national and regional walls and renounced "preoccupation with narrower domestic matters."

PEPIN
. . . on offensive

★ ★ ★

In Ottawa Prime Minister Trudeau acknowledged Tuesday that the government is gravely concerned about the implications for Canada should the world's major trading nations — particularly, the United States — proceed to adopt protectionist trade policies.

The prime minister told the Commons that the government would make its concerns known to the United States at the annual U.S.-Canadian ministerial talks on economic and trade problems to be held in Ottawa next Monday and Tuesday.

Canada's prosperity demands a continuing momentum towards freer world trade, Pepin said. Canada had always considered the U.S. its ally in international trade "as in so many fields."

"Today, we are no longer in that fortunate situation. There is admittedly a trade expansion act of 1970 now before the Congress, but it is legislation which, in our view, not only contains dangerously protectionist elements but entirely lacks the positive forward thrust that the present situation requires.

"I hope I may be forgiven if I suggest that the title 'trade-expansion act' may seem something of a misnomer."

★ ★ ★

The major trading countries should be equipped quickly with the broad powers necessary to enter into substantive negotiations on trade, said Pepin.

The U.S. can hardly expect free-trade initiatives from foreign trading groups, such as the European Economic Community, if by restrictive legislation it encourages counter-measures abroad, Pepin said.

"We must prepare to act if we are to avoid slipping back into the trade and economic attitudes of the '30s. In the international sense, we have already been through the process of exploring the scope and the means for further trade liberalization.

"We are now at the stage where all this work is in serious danger of being pigeon-holed unless we shake off our preoccupation with narrower domestic matters and make the decision to move ahead."

Pepin said the future of the world trading system is "the most important economic problem that we face in common at this time."

In reply to questions from Opposition Leader Stanfield, the prime minister said Canada had been trying to impress upon all trading nations the importance of multilateral trade.

He made reference to a tough speech delivered in Vancouver Monday by Finance Minister Edgar Benson. In that speech, Benson deplored the emergence of protectionist policies in the U.S., and urged the Americans to take "meaningful initiatives" toward lowering world trade barriers.

The finance minister's speech, Trudeau told the Commons, "is part of the expression of these very serious concerns we have with the development of world trade by the formation of blocks, whether within Europe or the United States."

The prime minister noted that Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin had made a similar presentation to members and prospective members of the European Common Market a few weeks ago.

Stripper Has Pub Bust Worried

OTTAWA (CP) — An amateur stripper who used poppies for pasties at the Carleton University student pub has student management worried about busts.

Police busts, that is.

The girl, described in the university student newspaper as a "slightly overblown" second year arts student, had been packing them in at the pub's Monday night amateur exhibitions.

Two weeks ago she took the amateur night first prize of $10 with an impromptu topless performance. Last week she did it again—this time with an act which included paper poppies in a gesture of limited modesty.

●

But word about her performance spread as far as the Ottawa police morality squad. Monday night squad officers dropped in to check the banquet licence under which the student-run pub operates.

Frequent police visits are not considered desirable by the pub operators, who note that the student population has an averrage age of less than 20 years. Legal drinking age is 21.

Tim Miedema, student council vice-president, said pub business dropped off sharply following the police visit. In future, he added, amateur night entertainment will be "more organized" in an attempt to keep it from attracting police interest.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
GETS THE BIG OK!

ENZYME ACTIVE all Concentrated for Automatics

OK

We gave Mrs. Dunfield an advanced pack of new lower phosphate "all", reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"I first started using "all" when we lived in the interior of B.C. The water was hard there and "all" gave me very satisfactory results. Also the concentrated action of "all" made it easier on my automatic washer. I have used "all" regularly since. The new low-phosphate "all" seems to wash just as well and is O.K. by me."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining "all's" high quality performance.

A thief attacked the Vicomtesse Jacqueline de Ribes as, wearing only a towel, she stepped from the bathroom of her Claridge Hotel suite in London. He then fled with jewels first estimates valued at more than $240,000, police said today. Police said the thief seized and chloroformed the wife of French banker Vicomte de Ribes as she was preparing for a party at the U.S. Embassy Tuesday evening.

Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill, who called 10 Downing Street home during the years her husband was prime minister, returned today as guest of present Prime Minister Edward Heath. The widow of Sir Winston Churchill, now 85, was guest of honor along with other Churchill family members at a luncheon hosted by Heath.

The London cast of Kenneth Tynan's nude revue, Oh! Calcutta! have threatened to appear on stage dressed unless proper heating is installed in their West End theatre. "Turn the heat on by Thursday night or we get dressed," they have told the management of the Royalty Theatre where the revue is showing. The revue, which gives London theatre-goers their first sight of full frontal nudity under the glare of spotlights, opened during the summer in North London. It was later transferred to the West End.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Tuesday that his department had tried four times to help the Williston Lake Indians move to facilitate deeper filling of the Bennett Dam in northern British Columbia. In answer to a question by Gerald W. Baldwin (PC-Peace River), Chretien said officials of his department had spoken with the leaders of the Long Grass band four times but that the band refused to move from its reserve north of Dawson Creek.

Jackson, Miss., police said that two diamond rings valued at a total of $40,000 apparently were thrown out with the trash during confusion in the emergency room of a Jackson hospital. Mrs. Cordell Reid of Magnolia was wearing the rings when she received emergency treatment at the University Medical Centre. A nurse's aide told authorities the rings had blood on them. Police concluded the rings probably were thrown out with the trash.

The first confirmation that Hughey was alive was the letter — the maximum length permitted by the North Vietnamese which said Hughey was "healthy and strong."

Rae Britts, 24, a modern-day William Tell, used his air rifle to shoot a piece of wood from one boy's mouth, a candle from another's hand and a coin from the hand of a third. Police took him to Chichester, England, court Tuesday because when the coin was hit, the boy's fingernails split and bled. Britts, charged with assault, told magistrates court it was found Britts guilty, fined him an accident. The magistrate $120 and ordered the rifle destroyed.

A passenger who wanted to get the clothes he had forgotten jumped from an American Airlines jet as it taxied for a takeoff Tuesday night at Detroit metropolitan airport. A spokesman for the airline said James Tunney, 39, a resident of New York and a student at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, suffered lacerations and was treated at Wayne County General Hospital.

Gastown To Fight Close Order

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city of Vancouver legal staff is studying the possibility of declaring Gastown an historic site in an attempt to avoid mandatory Sunday closing of business concerns in the downtown area.

An amendment to the Vancouver City Charter would be required at the next session of the provincial Legislature to make Gastown an historic site.

Campbell said he believes that special exemptions and privileges awarded historical areas may be enough to circumvent the controversial Sunday-closing issue.

Meanwhile Gastown merchants have decided to remain open Sunday, Dec. 6, despite a threat of prosecution under the Lord's Day Act.

It is understood any evidence gained Dec. 6 would be sent to the attorney-general's department for a decision on possible charges.

Collection Agency 'Despicable'

EDMONTON (CP) — The tactics used by a collection agency were described Monday by Magistrate John Coughlan as "despicable."

The comment came after Ervin Martin Braithwaite, 23, of Edmonton, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of impersonating a police officer.

Ernest Reid, the crown prosecutor, told the court Braithwaite, while employed by a collection agency, had told a man in a telephone conversation he was a city detective and if a certain bill was not paid promptly the man and his wife would be arrested.

"These are despicable tricks to use," the magistrate said.

"It's absolutely deplorable that you could think you could gouge money out of people this way."

Reid told the court it was a condition of employment with the firm that employees had to represent themselves as police officers.

"I wish I had your employers before me now rather than you," the magistrate told Braithwaite.

Magistrate Coughlan reserved sentence to today to enable the probation service to provide more information about the accused.

Peterson In Hospital

A spokesman for his office said the attorney-general was ill over the weekend during and following the Social Credit convention in Vancouver and is expected to be in hospital three or four days.

A scheduled appearance before the Social Credit caucus for a discussion of labor relations was cancelled today.

Recipe

CRESCENT CITY FRUIT CAKE

A white, elegant fruit cake. Makes 1 10-inch tube cake, 5 lbs. Recipe available in Culinary Caper sheet QQ.

- 1 15-oz. pkt. golden seedless raisins
- 2 cups candied pineapples (cut in chunks)
- 1 7-oz. can mixed salted nuts
- 1 cup shortening
- 1¾ cups sugar
- 1½ tsp. baking powder
- ¾ cup pineapple juice
- ½ cup green candied cherries
- 2 cups mixed candied peel (cut in chunks)
- 1 cup halved candied cherries (red)
- 4½ cups sifted flour
- ¼ cup butter (cultured)
- ½ tsp. almond extract
- 1½ tsp. salt
- 8 egg whites
- ½ tsp. cream of tartar

Toss together raisins, peel, candied fruits and nuts with ½ cup flour. Beat shortening and butter together, add sugar gradually, continuing beating until very light and fluffy. Add almond extract. Resift remaining 4 cups flour with baking powder and salt. Add alternately with pineapple juice, beating well after each addition. Stir in fruit mixture. Sprinkle cream of tartar over egg whites, beat until stiff enough to hold peaks, but not dry. Fold into batter. Spoon batter evenly into 10-inch tube pan lined with well greased and floured brown paper. Bake in slow oven 300 degree for 3 hours. Place shallow pan of water on bottom of oven during baking time. When baked, remove cake from pan, cool on rack, pulling paper down from sides of cake but leaving attached. When cooled, pull up paper around sides. Overwrap in foil or saran and store in cool place. If you wish, sprinkle cake with brandy before wrapping and during aging period.

Canadiana 'Will Survive'

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — The Canadian ambassador to the U.S. said Tuesday night that Canadians are determined to preserve and enrich their distinctive social and cultural values.

Marcel Cadieux told a Canadian-American audience that Canadians will not accept the thesis that the forces of continental integration "are so overwhelming that we will have to accept relatively painless loss of independence."

"We have every intention of ensuring that what we do have, we will preserve and enrich," he said. The mood of Canada is such that any extra costs and difficulties required to ensure survival undoubtedly will be accepted.

Cadieux was delivering the Boland Memorial Lecture at the 12th annual seminar on Canadian-American relations sponsored by the University of Windsor, Ont., and Columbia University here. The theme of this year's seminar is Canada: The Unknown Neighbor. It is being held for the first time in the United States.

The ambassador, who emphasized he was speaking personally and not as a representative of the government, said Canada is in a new phase of establishing the conditions which will best support a state that is neither homogeneous in language and culture nor unitary in political structures.

WANT CULTURE SAVED

French-speaking Canadians are concerned that their institutions should correspond to contemporary values and that their culture "should not suffer asphyxiation amid so many English-speaking people on the continent."

"The insistence by French-speaking Canadians on new and better conditions for their corporate existence within the country had the effect of making most English-speaking Canadians assess again their own concepts of national life."

The social and political ferment in Canada, he said, "has alerted us particularly to the problem of foreign investment; in other parts of the country companies from the United States can benefit from the use of English and a reasonable cultural homogeneity; in the predominantly French-speaking areas they will have to accommodate themselves to different conditions. . . ."

Two panel discussions were held Tuesday: one on defence policies and the other on economics.

Melville Watkins, professor of political economy at the University of Toronto, said American investment in Canada has turned the economy into a "branch plant."

TREATIES DON'T MATTER

In the defence panel, James Eayrs, professor of international relations at the University of Toronto, said he believes Canada can have a "free ride" in defence and that the United States would come to Canada's defence whether or not there were defence-sharing treaties.

He said the long-term policy of Canada should be to get out of these treaties. He asserted that the danger to Canada is not from the Russians coming over the North Pole but from south of the border.

Watkins clashed with two MPs in the audience when he said that American dominance of Canadian industry is one of the causes for the feeling of separation among the youth of Quebec.

Marcel Prud'homme, Liberal MP for Saint-Denis in Montreal, said the true concern of the Quebec young is language. He said Watkins gave the wrong impression of Canada.

Hyliard Chappell, Liberal MP for Peel South in Ontario, said that Watkins is "peddling the NDP manifesto." Watkins is a vice-president of the New Democratic Party.

Eayrs said Canada no longer is indispensible to the defence of the North American continent—merely convenient.

Gen. Jean V. Allard, former chief of the Canadian general staff and chairman of the defence panel, said if the U.S. spends large amounts on the defence of Canada, the Americans "will find a way to pay themselves back."

Bachelor Scores Adoption First

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Toby Patterson of Portland received a lot of phone calls the adoption proceedings for his son, Philip, 9, were completed.

"Some calls were kooky," Patterson says. "Like: 'Hey, man, we love you, we think you're great.'

"And others were just the opposite. Some people called to ask what religious training the boy would have. One man read a biblical quotation to me."

Patterson, a graduate of the University of Oregon, became interested in adoption after years of providing a home for foster sons. He received no state money for their support.

The household now includes two foster sons—brothers 15 and 16—besides Patterson and Philip. Proceedings for the adoption were completed last month.

"We're a fast-moving, athletic family," Patterson says. "At home, I mostly program general duties for everybody, keep 'em busy. Kids aren't happy if they aren't busy."

Who does the cooking?

"Frankly," Patterson said, "in 30 minutes I whip up a complete meal. We eat lots of broiled meat and salad . . . and potatoes."

PLANE CRASH TRAGEDIES

Pros Have Disaster Plans

NEW YORK (AP) — The plane crash tragedies which struck football teams from Wichita State and Marshall universities this season have focused attention on the plans devised by professional sports to deal with such potential catastrophes.

All four major professional team sports — baseball, football, basketball and hockey—have disaster plans for stocking teams devastated by accidents.

In baseball, the American and National leagues have separate plans which would create player pools from remaining teams to form a squad. The National League plan is not detailed but the American League plan goes into effect if six or more players are lost.

The National Football League has three separate plans for formulating a new team, depending on the number of casualties suffered by the affected team.

The National Basketball Association has a total disaster plan but none designed to deal with partial loss of a team. Should a team be completely wiped out, the remaining teams would be permitted to protect five players with the others placed in a draft pool to stock the affected team.

In the National Hockey League, the loss of five or more players sets in motion the plan which resembles the league's summer draft. Each remaining club would protect 10 skaters and one goalie with the remaining players open to a stocking draft with players equally supplied from all the teams.

OILMAN SENTENCED AFTER HEART PLEA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ray Ryan, an oilman and resort owner, has drawn a three-year prison term despite pleas by his lawyers that he might die from a heart condition if forced to spend that amount of time behind bars.

Ryan, 66, was convicted by a U.S. district court jury last July of obstructing justice. The prosecution charged he had membership records of the Mount Kenya Safari Club in Africa altered to hide the exclusive hunting club's dealings with Mafia members.

Ryan is part owner of the club along with actor William Holden and Swiss banker Carl Hirschmann. Ryan also heads Ryan Oil Co. of Evansville, Ill., and has resort holdings in the Palm Springs area.

Ryan's prison sentence was imposed Tuesday and he also was fined $5,000. His lawyer, Herbert J. Miller, filed an immediate appeal and Ryan was freed on $5,000 bond.

The maximum sentence on the conviction could have been five years.

SINGER DUMPS DRUGS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Roger Miller, country and western singer, says illicit drugs sent his career into decline and helped sink his television show. He finally quit them, he adds, last year.

"I decided one day I was going to be a man or a vegetable," he said in an interview Tuesday. "Today I'm a man."

The 34-year-old songwriter-singer, who wrote and recorded the two-million-selling King of the Road, said he started taking "uppers" — amphetamines — shortly after leaving his Erick, Okla., home when he was about 20 years old.

Throughout travels that included stops in Amarillo, Tex., where he was a fireman and in Nashville, Tenn., where he began singing in earnest, Miller said, he "was wanting to be a great song writer-singer and I would take a couple of pills and feel terrific."

Only after his performances fell below par, his ability to concentrate declined and his attitudes toward people began to worsen, Miller said, did he realize "you can't function with pills—you're fooling yourself."

Miller said pills played a role in the failure of his television show in 1967.

"Before I knew it I was in kind of a snake pit," he said. "Pills were all I ever took."

Miller said he quit when "it dawned on me that I was losing a grip on everything . . . my marriage was crumbling . . . music career fading."

Professors Sleep Through Classes

NEW YORK (AP) — Across the United States, thousands of people get up before the sun every morning to take college courses on television.

Sunrise Semester, produced by New York University and now in its eighth year, is seen on 85 CBS stations, mostly in early morning hours.

"It comes on here at 5:30 a.m. and I don't like that a bit," says Helen Worley of Kingsport, Tenn., a viewer since she tuned in a course on Russian literature a few years ago.

Thomas W. Barnes, Quincy, Mich., said "I get up because the courses are very good, very stimulating."

The students have to get up early, but the professors don't. Erwin O. Smigel, who conducts Urban Man: His Work and His Society, tapes his three weekly lectures Thursday afternoons. A few stations show the program in afternoon time.

The other course this semester — the two courses are seen on alternate days Monday through Saturday — is Early Renaissance Art in Italy, taught by Isabelle Hyman.

Smigel, a sociology professor at NYU, finds his first television course a little different from the classroom because he doesn't get an immediate feedback from the students.

"You are really talking to people behind the machines," he said, adding that he has to be careful not to begin talking to an interested cameraman. "I miss the interchange with students and I've asked them to write me."

But the lectures do go faster because there are no interruptions and more material is covered.

Viewers can take the courses in several days. Most simply watch to expand their knowledge and enrich their lives. A handful pay NYU $300 and enroll for credit and take tests and follow assigned reading work.

Others enrol for credit at 25 or so participating colleges and meet for occasional seminars and tests at those schools. In a few cases, the students actually gather at the professor's home in the early morning and watch over coffee.

Many viewers are college graduates. Mrs. Worley has a master's degree from Northwestern University.

'PhDs Piled High and Deep' As Graduates Look for Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — It costs about $144,000 to produce one PhD but an increasing number of these highly-trained university graduates are unable to find jobs, says a report released today by the Graduate Students' Union at the University of Toronto.

The union found that only 105 of 190 PhD graduates from U of T this year found jobs. Less than half of 158 who searched for work in universities found a position.

The report urges "immediate restrictions" in Canadian immigration policies on foreigners in professions where there is "abundant Canadian manpower."

It also calls on the provincial government to prohibit further expansion of graduate schools.

"As long as the economy remains foreign-dominated, no real solution is possible, only short-term measures to temporarily, avoid explosive situations," the report says.

The students' union combined its own survey with material from an unpublished Science Council of Canada study called PhDs Piled High and Deep.

It warns that the situation will get worse when the huge influx of students in the late '60s graduates in 1971 and 1972.

Canadian PhDs are not likely to find work in the United States, the report says, because recent changes in U.S. laws restrict immigration of Canadians while the United States also has a surplus of PhDs.

Meanwhile, "the incredible thing is that this surplus of PhDs as well as older and more experienced university teachers and scientists from the U.S. move freely across the Canadian border and compete quite successfully for scarce Canadian jobs."

It cites federal statistics that the federal government let over 500 chemists into Canada, mostly from the United Kingdom, in 1968 and 1969 at a time when Canadian chemists were finding it next to impossible to get jobs.

The report urges U of T to advertise for all positions in Canada first and in other countries only if qualified Canadians are not available.

The survey found women had "great difficulties" in getting jobs and married women the greatest difficulty of all.

The report said it can be assumed that if U of T graduates are having difficulty, so are graduates from other Canadian universities.

ORANGE CHAMPAGNE BRUNCH PUNCH and WESTERN ORANGE MARMALADE

Party-Time Citrus Fruits

Citrus fruits are good all year round, but seem even better at party or holiday time.

They also suggest that the orange peels left over after the juice has been extracted could be finished with pinking shears and used as novelty serving bowls.

ORANGE CHAMPAGNE BRUNCH PUNCH

1 bottle (4-5 quart) champagne, well chilled

2 cups freshly squeezed orange juice, chilled

½ cup brandy

WESTERN ORANGE MARMALADE

3 medium oranges, unpeeled, thinly sliced into half-cartwheels (3 cups)

1 medium lemon, unpeeled, thinly sliced into half-cartwheels (¾ cup)

3 quarts cold water

Sugar

Combine orange and lemon slices and water in large glass bowl; cover and let stand 12 hours, or overnight. Place in deep, heavy saucepan and bring to a boil; boil hard for 30 minutes until reduced to about 8 cups. Let stand 6 to 8 hours. Measure fruit and liquid; add an equal amount of sugar. Bring to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Boil rapidly until mixture sheets from a spoon when tested, approximately 30 minutes. Gently stir occasionally to avoid sticking. Remove from heat; stir and skim for 5 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal with paraffin. (Makes six to seven ½ pint jars).

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

LAMB SANDWICH SURPRISE

1 cup finely diced cooked lamb
½ cup finely diced celeery
½ cup grated cucumber, drained
2 tbsp. mayonnaise
⅛ tsp. curry powder
2 tbsp. hamburger relish
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
2 tsp. dried chopped onion
¼ tsp. garlic salt with parsley
Freshly ground pepper

Drain excess liquid from cucumber. Combine all ingredients with a fork. Chill. Spread about ¼ cup of chilled lamb mixture betweeen buttered slices of bread or burger bun. Crisp lettuce leaves in each sandwich will add a crunchy mixture. Yield 1½ cups filling; enough for six double-slice sandwiches.

To vary usage, serve up satisfying hot supper sandwiches accented by lamb spread. Prepare French toast using a dipping mixture of one egg, four tablespoons milk and a few grains of salt. Then add lamb mixture and garnish with parsley.

MANDARINS AND CUCUMBERS IN SOUR CREAM

3 mandarin oranges separated into segments, seeded
1 large cucumber, peeled, thinly sliced
1 cup dairy sour cream
1 tbsp. snipped fresh parsley
1 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. salt
1 small clove garlic, crushed

Place mandarin segments and cucumber slices in glass bowl. Pour over a mixture of remaining ingredients; stir to mix well. Chill at least 30 minutes before serving. (Makes six to eight servings.)

Simple Pattern Best for Velvet

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I bought enough beautiful sculptured or cut velvet for a very plain, straight coat. Having never worked on this type of fabric, I am wondering about any tricks you might have and also what to do about buttonholes. I'm also thinking about having the coat waterproofed if possible and use it for an all purpose "glamour coat."—Mrs. C.R.M.

Dear Mrs. C.R.M.:

Sculptured or cut velvet is not only very popular today, but also very glamorous. Remember a few points before cutting and during construction. Be sure all of the parts of your pattern are cut in the same direction. Choose a very simple pattern that will show off the lovely fabric (also make it easier to make).

We usually suggest you don't make bound buttonholes in this type of coat. There are several other solutions, you may simply use the large, covered snaps as a closing. If you want buttons, sew them on the coat as an accent, using the covered snaps again as a closing. Perhaps you could use braided frogs, or chain closings. There are many interesting ways of closing a garment, depending on how much detail is in the fabric.

Most velvets have a natural water-repellency, check yours and if it doesn't, your cleaners can waterproof a garment for very little money. Press carefully, if you don't have a needle board, steam and pat your seams with a pounding block. Your read-made garment can be steam pressed after it is completed. A coat of this type is an asset to any wardrobe, just watch the compliments come in!

DEAR ABBY . . .

Forgiveness best

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful husband and a beautiful baby boy. When Eric and I got married I was two months along. When we told my parents about my condition they wanted nothing to do with us, so Eric's parents gave us a small but lovely church wedding and reception for which I shall always be grateful to them.

Soon after the baby was born my parents realized they had made a mistake so they called asking if they could come and see their new grandchild.

Of course I let them, and they have been just wonderful since then. Abby, I still love my parents and am happy to let bygones be bygones.

My problem is my mother-in-law. She is still mad at my parents and said I was a fool for making up with them. She said, "When you needed them they turned their backs on you, but now they want the joys of being grandparents, which they do not deserve."

Abby, I know I owe Eric's mother a lot, and I hate to hurt them, but I can't bear a grudge against my own parents. Did I do wrong?—In the Middle.

DEAR IN: No. Be assured you did the right thing in making up with your parents. You mother-in-law is in the wrong for trying to encourage ill-feelings between you and your parents.

DEAR ABBY: What is a mother supposed to say when her child asks, "Can Jimmy stay for supper?" and Jimmy is standing right there looking up into your face?

I always say, "Of course, but Jimmy has to call his mother and get her permission first."

Then my brat says, "Mother, you call Jimmy's mother. He's afraid to."

So, like a ninny, I go to call Jimmy's mother, and she says, "Are you sure he'll be no trouble?" Then what am I supposed to say? Anyway, I think you have the picture.

I really don't object to one, or more, little tykes for supper because mine is an only child and it gives him someone to play with, but I don't like being manoeuvred into it this way and my son pulls this often. Also, after summer they play until it's dark, and guess who has to take the dinner guest home? Is there a solution?—On the Spot.

DEAR ON: Your resentment at being outsmarted by a couple of junior con artists is understandable, but be glad you son has friends. Simply tell him to ask you privately if he may have a guest for supper.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 25 years old and he still sucks his thumb. He only does this at night. He says that's the only way he can fall asleep.

It doesn't bother me except that I think there must be something wrong with him, and I'd like to break him of this habit. He is normal in every other way. What should I do?—Thumb-sucker's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: If he's normal in every other way, let him alone.

DEAR ABBY: Could you please tell the world to stop punishing dogs with a rolled-up newspaper? No wonder dogs bite newspaper carriers. They see the newspaper and they think they are going to get hit, so they attack the person who's delivering it. I know. I am a newspaper carrier.

Not only that, but mail carriers look like they are carrying newspapers, too, which confuses dogs, so they also get bit. When I am delivering newspapers, little kids under five years old will get me mixed up with the mailman.

So, if dog owners will not whip dogs with rolled-up newspapers, it will help a lot of people. Thanks, Keep up the good work.—Tom in Lynchburg, Va.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Paris-Born Fashion Designer At Home in Montreal Scene

MONTREAL (CP) — Cathy Lullier, Paris-born model-turned-designer, is right in the midst of the Montreal fashion scene, but much prefers her one-room cottage near Mont Tremblant in the Laurentians, where she can ski during weekends.

Cathy and her photographer husband, Mark Lullier, met at fashionable Deauville, France, when Cathy was a child. Her family lived there for five years and the Lulliers were also making it their headquarters.

Years later Cathy and Mark met again in Paris. Then Mark came over to Montreal as a photographer. Once established, he returned to Paris and married Cathy who, in the meantime, had been doing fashion modelling. She'd also had a fling at helping in the salon of the famous designer Jacqes Heim, a friend of her parents. Today the Lulliers are confirmed Montrealers of 13 years standing.

Cathy loves clothes and has designed her own for years. She also loves to entertain and often has a dinner party of eight to 10 friends. "If you have more than 10, you cannot do a good cooking job," she said. "I love candles on the dinner table and indeed I have candles everywhere." Her favorite dinner piece de resistance is small birds burned with cognac and cooked in wine, with mushrooms and chestnuts.

Some five years ago, Cathy started a boutique of her own designs. Then three years ago, Dolman Couture, a national manufacturer, asked her to design a Cathy line for them. She does 15 to 30 garments for each of the four yearly collections—spring, summer, fall and cruise.

She still carries on her boutique, in the apartment below her own, for her private clientele, and has added some of her Dolman ready-to-wear line for off-the-rack buying.

The skirt length controversy is summed up by Cathy as depending on your own moods. However she does feel that just below the knees is old-fashioned. And a hat is essential for any longuette look.

Reason No. 2—The steering is great. It's called rack and pinion. No other North American car has it—but some imports—like Jaguar, Ferrari and Porsche.

A Campus Can Become Protest Prone When System Means More Than People

NEW YORK (UPI)—If son or daughter calls collect from college, that's normal.

If son or daughter during the call complains of feeling restless on the campus, that's normal, too.

And it's not necessarily his or her fault, according to a college dean who recently completed a year-long tour of colleges in the United States and Europe.

Laurence Boylan, Dean of Graduate Studies at Kansas State Teachers College in Emporia, says indifference to teaching and concern over the entire educational process may be the major factors resulting in student unrest on college campuses.

Boylan visited 35 schools in the United States and Europe. He came back to Emporia convinced there are "serious and critical shortcomings in the educational process in higher education."

Boylan told the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU):

"The main reasons for student unrest by moderate students are to be found in the educational process of the colleges and universities and not in social issues, whether or not President Nixon visits campuses or what Vice-President Agnew says or does."

He said campuses are divided into camps. Students and sometimes some faculty members make up one camp. The other is composed of faculty and administration and sometimes trustees.

"Co-ordinated purpose and direction is impossible where polarization occurs," he said.

Boylan made a study of characteristics or what he termed "the protest prone campus." He said the most important is that "the aims and purposes of faculty, students, administrators and trustees are not in congruence."

He said students want an integration of subject matter with personal development and faculty continued to "place emphasis on facts and information."

"Too often," Boylan said, "students are accused of being interested only in relevance with no course content, history or factual base for their judgment.

"The indictment is false, but we don't understand that. We just keep giving our lectures."

On too many campuses, according to the educator, the student is the only segment that is interested in the learning process.

Among characteristics of the protest prone campus he identified:

- People are not considered as a major segment of the educational process. The system is what is left after people have been squeezed out.
- All segments of the campus are not involved in the decision-making.
- Grading procedures, courses and degree requirements are not reviewed.
- Lack of warm relationships among faculty and students.

Immigration Law Changes Would End Stalling by Appeal

By IAN PORTER

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Otto Lang had praise Tuesday for a report to the government which recommends stiff new restrictions on the legal rights of visitors to Canada seeking to obtain landed immigrant status.

The report, prepared by Toronto lawyer Joseph Sedgwick, recommends amendments to immigration laws and regulations to end legal stalling by visitors who are ordered deported after failing to qualify for landed immigrant status.

Mr. Lang told reporters the report had been designed to provide a focus for both government and public attention on the problem of a huge backlog of appeals to the Immigration Appeal Board from visitors seeking to stay in the country.

Recommendations based on a study of the report would be presented to Parliament by the government "in due course," the minister said.

He added that Mr. Sedgwick's endorsement of a proposal to transfer to a special security board hearings on appeals involving security cases made "significant sense."

The report, which Mr. Lang had just tabled, was commissioned last June by then immigration minister Allan MacEachen after studies indicated widespread abuse of 1967 changes in immigration regulations.

VISITORS COULD APPEAL

The changes have permitted visitors to apply for landed immigrant status after arriving in the country and those who fail to qualify under the department's point-rating system are eligible to appeal to the independent appeal board.

Mr. Sedgwick's report says the average time lag between a deportation order and a hearing before the board is about 18 months and will be two years by the end of 1970. There was a backlog of close to 3,200 cases as of August, with appeals arriving at the rate of 400 monthly. The report says the board can handle about 1,200 cases annually.

Recommended is an end to the right to appeal to the board by rejected visitors. Instead they would be entitled to an inquiry into their case by an officer of the immigration department itself. Leave to appeal would be granted by the board only in special cases.

The alternative, Mr. Sedgwick reports, would be to greatly increase the staff of the immigration division and the personnel of the appeal board. It would be, he states, an unwarranted expense of tax money "solely to get rid of persons who do not meet our immigration standards."

The problem has become acute with an increase to 42,000 last year from 28,000 in 1968 of applications for landed status from visitors. About 77 per cent are acceptable and cause no problem, the report says. The trouble is caused by "applicants who do not qualify, many of whom intend to exhaust all their legal remedies before leaving."

GET JOB, GET MARRIED

Mr. Sedgwick said many people succeed in their appeals by having "entrenched themselves" in Canadian society during the long waiting period.

An official of the immigration department said the recommendations would affect principally visitors to Canada from southern Europe who have heard they can win permanent entry to the country by stalling long enough to find a job, learn the language and get married.

Mr. Lang said the report's proposals would have little effect on the flow into Canada of U.S. draft evaders and deserters, most of them being of the right age and educational level to qualify for landed status.

Mr. Lang also said Mr. Sedgwick's proposals for dealing with security cases would have little effect on the entry of visiting political radicals from other countries.

Mr. Sedgwick recommends that the government accept the proposal of the royal commission on security for creation of a special review board to look into applications for landed status of subversives.

He also suggests that requests for political asylum would best be handled by the immigration minister himself rather than the immigration appeal board.

To deal with its backlog, the report says, the board should first go through its files and approve all cases which would probably be accepted on compassionate grounds. To deal with the remaining appeals, the board should then be temporarily enlarged.

Air Race Snags Develop

The London-to-Victoria air race next summer is drawing international inquiries from pilots but Canada's tough over-ocean flight rules are creating snags.

Local pilot Roy Parrett, B.C. director for the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association, said Tuesday that as matters now stand some competitors qualify to fly the race but then couldn't fly out of Canada to other continents.

Canadian flying regulations require any pilot flying the ocean to have class one instrument rating and certain navigation gear not normally carried in planes.

Class one rating means a pilot is qualified to fly "blind," that is, on instruments without reference to the horizon, the conditions that bad weather such as fog can produce.

Planes flying out of Canada over the ocean must carry high frequency radio equipment, a sophisticated navigation aid usually carried only by planes flying in remote areas like the Northland.

Parrett said the association is now taking the matter up with federal transport officials. He believes a compromise solution of some sory may be found.

The 5,851-mile race begins in London next July 1 and is scheduled to end in Victoria July 7. It is one of the events the federal government is helping soonsor to mark B.C.'s Centennial.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HORNE—Gerald Buckney. In loving memory of a dear son and brother, who passed away on Nov. 18, 1968.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered by your loving mother, brothers and sisters.

LOGAN — In loving memory of William, who passed away Nov. 18, 1968.
His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.

PANNELL—In loving memory of our dear mother, Gladys Pannell, who passed away Nov. 18, 1968.
The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well;
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.
—Remembered always by sons Brian and Allan Pannell, and daughter-in-law Donna.

CABLEVISION 10 PROGRAMS, 5 p.m., Ladies First, 6 p.m., Project Travel — Traveliving; 6:30 p.m., The Prime Resource; 7 p.m., Victoria Outdoorsmen, Hunting Edition; 7:30 p.m., Struggle for a Border — Canada and the American Revolution.

★ ★ ★

DIANA RICARDO, 6 p.m., Channel 2. This Vancouver-originating talk show tonight features interviews with Daphne Goldrick and Eric Schneider of the Vancouver Arts Club.

★ ★ ★

PRO FOOTBALL, 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. The Saskatchewan Roughriders meet the Calgary Stampeders in the second game of the best-of-three Western finals. Frank Rigney, Don Wittman and Ernie Afaganis report the action.

★ ★ ★

THE STOREFRONT LAWYERS, 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. You must admit that these young attorneys do not discriminate when it comes to clients. Their latest is a young man who is accused of assault and his victim is the boy's ex-lawyer. Psychology plays as much a part as the law here, with a probe into his background to determine the underlying causes for his erratic behavior the major issue. Kurt Russell is featured.

★ ★ ★

THE MEN FROM SHILOH, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. "Experiment in New Life." James Dury stars tonight in an examination of a strange commune whose life style and laws leave the Virginian more than somewhat perturbed. Some Shiloh cattle have wandered or otherwise been absorbed into the nomad community's herd. When the Virginian goes to retrieve them, he is surprised by the manners of the people, then prevailed upon by the widow of their founder to help her escape. She says that she and her daughter are being forced into a "commune marriage." Ralph Meeker, Vera Miles and Sue Lyon are featured.

★ ★ ★

MAKE ROOM FOR GRANDDADDY, 8 p.m., Channel 4. Whether or not you are a fan of this series, you'll enjoy this half hour starring Frank Sinatra. The script is built around a pair of fantasy sequences, after Frank arrives at Danny's home for a dinner date. The goggle-eyed Kathy, almost floored by the Sinatra greeting, a kiss, dreams of the far-out swinging life he must lead. Later when Sinatra invites the couple to his Palm Springs home for a visit, Danny starts creating his own fantasy, including things like computerized girls, by the dozen.

★ ★ ★

THE KRAFT MUSIC HALL, 9 p.m., Channel 5. "The Detective." This show consists of a series of skits and spoofs of famous detectives, from Sherlock Holmes to Charlie Chan, starring Don Adams, Raymond Burr, David Janssen, Will Jordan and Elisha Cook Jr. Among the features are Don Adams' takeoff on Humphrey Bogart in "The Maltese Parakeet," with Raymond Burr. Janssen spoofs "Tony Romeo," and Don does his impression of Charlie Chan. TV lawmen get touched from the "Untouchables" to "77 Sunset Strip." A very funny show.

★ ★ ★

MEDICAL CENTRE, 9 p.m., Channel 12. Chad Everett as Dr. Joe Gagnon is up to his neck in trouble and it makes no difference which way he turns. He's going to be wrong anyway. Barry Sullivan guests as a rich elderly man extremely jealous of his young beautiful wife. He envisions a romance with Dr. Everett over her frequent visits, not knowing the serious nature of her illness. In the meantime, she has sworn the doctor to secrecy. Diane Baker co-stars.

★ ★ ★

HAWAII FIVE-O, 10 p.m., Channel 12, Ray Denton is equal to the tough role given to him tonight. He's a popular entertainer and ecological champion, charged with the dynamiting of a faulty sewage plant during which a man was killed. The police think he was framed and want to help discover his unknown enemy. He, however, is determined to keep it a personal thing, and find the guilty party himself.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Years ago, there was great rejoicing when several drugs were constructed which relieved diabetics in those many cases in which the disease appeared in a mild form late in the person's life. These remedies could be taken by mouth, not with a hypodermic needle, and this brought great happiness to thousands of adult diabetics. Still, the young patient who gets his diabetes early in life, perhaps in his childhood or early adulthood, must take insulin and must keep injecting it into his muscles throughout his life.

Another type of diabetic who gets his diabetes later in life, perhaps in his fifties or sixties, has so mild a form of the disease that it can be controlled with diet alone.

Diabetes mellitus is an heritary disease in which the pancreas, the big digestive gland that contains the important "islet cells" (the islets of Langerhans) that in a normal person produce insulin, does not function properly; the resulting lack of insulin in the person's body can eventually produce death.

Years ago, before insulin was discovered by Drs. Banting and Best in Toronto, we doctors had to stand by and watch young children and young adults who developed diabetes waste away and son die, and we did not know any way to give them the insulin they needed to save them. Now, thanks to daily injections of the drug, a diabetic, with proper good care of his health, can live out his normal life-span happily and productively.

People often wonder why insulin must be taken by injection rather than orally, and the reason is that insulin is promptly digested in the stomach, and when digested, is of no value. However, when a few years ago a different type of drug was discovered that could be taken by mouth without being digested, some diabetics — those who got the disease later in life — could give up their daily injections. The oral type of drug works differently from the insulin, that is, by stimulating the "islet cells" in the pancreas to release more insulin. The differenc is that in youngsters, the "islet cells" are almost gone, so that little insulin can be produced.

Now, the medical world and diabetics who have been taking the oral type of drug, are much disturbed by press reports that say that not only does the oral type of medicine have no value, but even that it sometimes injures the heart. Such statements are not supportd by the AMA, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration or the American Diabetes Association; and Dr. Charles D. Edwards, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, says that there is no thought of removing this type of drug from the market, and that they do not support these reports.

Police Unaware Trio in Closet

QUEBEC (CP)—Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Tuesday that police who arrested a suspect in the kidnapping and slaying of former labor minister Pierre Laporte were unaware three other suspects were hiding in a secret compartment in the same apartment where the arrest was made.

Mr. Choquette told the Quebec national assembly the three men were apparently hiding in a walk-in clothes closet in the west-end Montreal apartment when Bernard Lortie was arrested Nov. 6.

Mr. Choquette said brothers Paul and Jacques Rose and Francis Simard were apparently in the secret closet and escaped when, at 6:30 p.m. the following day, police on guard in the apartment left temporarily.

The justice minister said that although police had not been entirely successful in their investigations of the kidnappings so far, this was no time to criticize them.

He described as "inopportune", a statement by Prime Minister Trudeau in the Commons Nov. 10 in which Mr. Trudeau said the failure of police investigations was part of the reason for the invocation of the War Measures Act. Mr. Choquette said the remark could have affected police morale.

A newspaper report in Montreal said a high-level police investigation is under way to determine how a tape recording of two incarcerated persons was smuggled out of provincial police headquarters where they are being detained.

The three-minute recording by lawyer Robert Lemieux and labor leader Michel Chartrand, both charged with seditious conspiracy and being members of the outlawed FLQ, was played Tuesday at a news conference.

The Gazette quotes an unidentified QPP spokesman as saying the force's police director, Maurice St. Pierre, is aware of the tape recording and "something is going to be done about it."

City May Support Merchants' Program

Victoria council's B Committee Tuesday approved part of a plan to spruce up the 600 block of Yates Street and buy a parking lot on the north side.

The move was the result of negotiations with businesses on the block which have recommended a long-range plan of improvements for the area.

Council will be asked to ratify the committee's decision to pay 25 per cent of the costs of widening sidewalks and install plants and benches. Businesses on the block will pay the balance.

By buying Mag's parking lot, council will maintain control in the area which is expected to attract land buyers and developers.

It was also decided not to proceed "at this time" with two proposed phases of the long-range plan which would include pedestrian malls behind stores on the the north side of Yates.

Cost of the parking lot could be as high as $145,000.

More Lights to Fight Drug Abuse in Square

A request to improve the lighting in Bastion Square was approved Tuesday by Victoria council's B Committee which heard complaints that a "drug culture" has degraded the square's appeal.

A letter from the Bastion Square Association said "it is apparent that the growing congregation of Victoria's drug culture around the Langley Street entrance to the Churchill Hotel beer parlor has seriously undermined the appeal of Bastion Square."

The committee agreed to improve the lighting while preserving the valued old gas lamp standards.

The letter adds that local merchants believe police are "doing their best to hold the line against this worsening situation and wish to avoid encumbering them with a public controversy such as arose in Centennial Square."

"However, the inadequacies of lighting in the square are, for obvious reasons, compounding these problems."

Crisis Vote Requested

Provincial cabinet approval will be sought to hold referendums to build 472 emergency classrooms throughout the province at a cost of $25 million, Education Minister Donald Brothers said Tuesday.

The amounts to be approved for submission to the voters include $1.1 million for Campbell River, $658,000 for Courtenay, $602,000 for Cowichan and $893,000 for Vancouver Island north.

All capital borrowing by school boards must be approved by ratepayers but in the past year the government has been allowing only emergency classroom needs to be met.

Bothers said another $26 million in emergency spending had been allowed up to October of this year, and hoped the new approvals, if accepted by the voters, would prevent overcrowding of schools in the 1971-72 year.

Polluting Companies 'Should Lose Profits'

CHICAGO (AP) — Companies that cause air and water pollution should be put into "environmental receivership" and required to spend their profits on pollution control, consumer advocate Ralph Nader suggested Tuesday.

Such a receivership would not force a company to fold and would not throw its employees out of work, Nader said.

"Only one per cent of the corporate profits in this country last year was used to stop ongoing pollution," he added.

Nader made the suggestion in an address to the opening session of the Midwest Regional Conference on Science, Technology and State Government.

Other recommendations by Nader included giving the federal agencies now being regrouped into the new environmental Protection Agency the same regulatory powers as the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"The SEC can put brokerages out of business because of relatively trivial violations," he added. "Why can't those same sanctions be used in the industrial area?

Ottawa Backs Birth Control

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has backed up its September decision to engage in birth control programs with $1,505,000, all of it to be used internationally.

A $1,000,000 grant will go to the United Nations fund for population activities and another $505,000 will be contributed to the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

Both sums were included in supplementary spending estimates tabled in the Commons Tuesday.

There was no sign of funds for a domestic family planning program although Health Minister John Munro announced last September that one would be undertaken.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
"all"
GETS THE BIG OK!

OK
says Mrs. F. Dunfield of Vancouver, B.C.
We gave Mrs. Dunfield an advanced pack of new lower phosphate "all", reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"I first started using "all" when we lived in the interior of B.C. The water was hard there and "all" gave me very satisfactory results. Also the concentrated action of "all" made it easier on my automatic washer. I have used "all" regularly since. The new low-phosphate "all" seems to wash just as well and is O.K. by me."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining "all's" high quality performance.

Pope's Australian Visit Calls for Exact Planning

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — When Pope Paul comes to Australia he will travel 69.65 miles by road and take six hours 50 minutes to do it.

That exa[illegible]de typifies the [illegible]ov. 30-Dec. 3 visit.

The need for such planning is the crowd expected to turn out. Roman Catholic authorities expect 500,000 people to attend a mass to be held Dec. 1 at the Randwick race track.

"This is the biggest single task of its type ever undertaken in an enclosed area in Australia," said Asher Joel, deputy chairman for a citizens' welcome committee.

The 200-acre race track three miles from downtown Sydney was chosen because it is the only place capable of coping with such a crowd.

Bookmakers' stands will be moved and the betting board camouflaged. A specially-designed altar is being built. There will be 10,000 dwarf marigolds and white petunias about the podium.

Roman Catholics in Australia's bicentenary marking the 12.7 million population. The visit coincides with Australia's bicentenary making the landing of Capt. James Cook and the start of the country's colonization.

"We want to show that all Australian Catholics and non-Catholics are proud the Pope is coming in our bicentenary year," Joel said.

TO SKIP SERVICE

The visit has caused dissension among Protestants, however. It started when the Anglican Archbishop of Sydney, Most Rev. Marcus L. Loane, announced he would skip interdenominational services for Christian unity to be attended by the Pope.

The Roman Catholic Church and the Australian Council of Churches are inviting 2,250 churchmen to the service.

"There are questions of truth which must be resolved before we can share in common worship or in unfettered fellowship with the Roman Catholic Church," Archbishop Loane said.

But the Anglican Archbishop of Melbourne, Most Rev. Frank Woods, who is acting primate of Australia, said he hoped to attend.

The superintendent of the National Methodist Church, Dr. James S. Udy, said Loane's outlook was "theologically incorrect and ecumenically myopic."

Aeration Proposed

EDMONTON (CP) — A natural gas-powered aeration might be the answer to keeping some of Alberta's rivers pollution-free during the winter, W. O. Neumeister, a Northwestern Utilities Ltd. Engineer, told a pollution seminar Tuesday. He described a system of mixing a stream of air bubbles with river water with a low dissolved oxygen content.

Permanent Food Supply Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

A gardener may feel unable to cope with the preparation and care of a vegetable garden each year, yet knows the value of freshly-gathered food. Why not plant more permanent sources of food supply; ones which will produce year after year without necessity of replacement?

Hilda

In addition, these permanent plants contribute increasing beauty to the garden, a sense of continuity, and a certain amount of screening from noise and movement of traffic.

These permanent plants are not the conventional fruit trees—apples, pears, plums and so on which need considerable attention in a small garden—but a few nuts, figs, and perhaps small fruits.

Plants like these give us food of highest value and are aesthetically pleasing too. What more can we ask?

Filbert nuts take a few years to grow into bearing, but given the humus-filled soil they need, good drainage and full sunshine they make their growth quickly and pleasingly.

Sucker growth at the base should be removed otherwise it continues at the expense of extension growth, resulting in a thicket of great interest to birds but producing few nuts.

Height can be controlled to six feet or so, wall that is needed in a small garden, and a spread of six or eight feet will give the screening effect referred to earlier.

Pruning is needed more as time passes, for it is newer wood which bears nuts. Purning of filberts is done early in March, but not until the male catkins have shed pollen over the brush-like reddish female flowers. Cut back vigorous side shoots of branches to a catkin a few inches from the base of the shoot. The small twiggy wood of the previous year will be bearing the (female) flowers to produce nuts.

This sounds complicated but studying the growth habits of filberts make it more reasonable. The trees can be planted now and studied later since they need only removal of suckers for a few years.

Fig trees can be grown here in areas free from late spring frost, or even in a spot protected from morning sun but with full exposure to sun for the rest of the day.

To fruit well, fig roots must be confined. Here we see them growing and producing figs when wedged between rocks, on garage walls beside blacktop, or in concrete patio tubs.

Growth begins rather late in spring, so summer heat is needed to bring on the new shoots bearing figs in fall. Stopping these shoots by the end of August after fruits are formed hastens ripening.

This stopping of the present season's shoots also has some effect on formation of fruit initiation for the next season.

These kinds of food plants eliminate yearly ground preparation, the back-breaking stooping and daily attention needed by vegetables, yet result in developing new cultivation skills to maintain ample interest in the home garden.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

At the upper echelons of play, where almost all of the participants are pretty close to being equal with respect to technical proficiency in both bidding and play, the ability to deceive often plays a predominant role in determining the outcome of any given deal, or any given match.

And so, quite often, one expert tries to deceive another. Sometimes the deception works, sometimes it doesn't. In today's deal, which arose in the quarter-finals of Masters Knockout-Team-of-Four Championships held this past summer in Boston, a prominent expert was sitting in the East seat. At trick two, he made a deceptive play, hoping to trick declarer. When play had ended, he would have liked to "have folded his tent, and silently stolen away."

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

Opening lead: Eight of ♣.

South's four spade bid was a gross overbid — but, with the assistance of the East defender, South's transgression passed by unnoticed.

East put up the club queen on the opening lead, and South won the trick with his ace. The three of trumps was led next, West played the eight, and South inserted dummy's 10, hoping that West possessed the jack.

As can be observed, had East played normally, he would have taken the 10 with the jack. He would then have cashed the king and ace of trumps, after which he would have returned a club. The defenders would now have made two club tricks, and declarer would have suffered a two-trick set.

But East, knowing that he could always make three trump tricks, decided to try to deceive declarer as to the location of the trump jack. So he captured dummy's 10 of trumps with his ace!

He then returned a low heart, hoping his partner possessed the king. South won the trick with the heart jack, after which he ruffed a club with the board's deuce of trumps. The closed hand was next re-entered via the king of hearts, and South's last club was ruffed with dummy's queen of spades.

On the ace of hearts, South discarded a diamond. The ace and king of diamonds were then played. At this point, South had nothing but trumps left in his hand — and he conceded two trump tricks to East's king and jack. South's only losers were three trump tricks.

By J.A.H. HUNTER

Aunt Amelia smiled, shaking her head. "You never ask that," she said.

"I know," Doug admitted. "But make me a puzzle about your age. That's different."

"Maybe it is." Amelia was thinking. "Well, if you subtract each digit of my age from what you get when you multiply those two digits together, you'll get half my age."

Well?

'Most Airports Lack Blind Landing Aids'

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half the airports in the United States serving scheduled airliners lack modern guidance devices to help pilots make blind landings in bad weather, an Associated Press study shows.

The AP study, made in the wake of the 75-death Marshall University football air tragedy, disclosed that more than eight million passengers a year land at airports without bad-weather guidance beams.

Even the 747 jumbo jets—the most sophisticated airliners ever built—are due to begin landing in 13 days at the Phoenix, Ariz., airport, which has no glide slope landing device.

The Huntington, W. Va., airport, where Marshall's chartered twin-engined DC-9 jet hit a tree-studded ridge Saturday while coming in too low on a rainy night, has neither radar nor a glide slope device.

A glide slope system beams an electronic signal at the plane to line up the crosshairs on a cockpit instrument and turn on a red warning if the jet strays too low or too high. The DC-9, like all modern planes, had the equipment—but Huntington's hilltop airport did not.

USE SELECTIVE

Glide slope equipment normally is installed only for runways facing prevailing winds and thus most frequently used. When the wind is in the opposite direction, pilots must rely on the localizer beacon associated with the glide-slope facility and make an approach such as the one at Huntington. Pilots refer to this as a "back-beam" approach.

Similarly, ground-controlled approach radar normally is set up for the runway facing prevailing winds. Radar-assisted approaches can be made from the other direction, but the GCA operator has no indication of the plane's altitude. He gives verbal course corrections to the pilot, and advises the pilot every few seconds what the plane's altitude should be.

Phoenix heads a list of 304 airports in the continental United States that also lack the glide slope landing device—including such major points as Las Vegas, Nev.; Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Tucson, Ariz.; Bangor, Me., and Helena, Mont.

These 304 airports handle nearly 2,000 flights a day—roughly one out of every nine airline landings in the U.S.

At Tucson, 40 jetliners touch down daily at a desert airport rimmed by mountains rising up to 9,400 feet. In the control tower, one FAA supervisor said the lack of proper landing equipment has caused pilots at night to complain "it's like flying into a black hole."

COURT INVOLVED

At Fort Lauderdale, a court fight over two palm trees near the runway threshhold has blocked, at least temporarily, the use of new instrument-landing-system equipment installed, but still idle, at an airport serving a half-million passengers a year.

In Harlingen, Tex., another DC-9 jet clipped off the top of a tree and a utility pole while groping toward a landing in a blind fog early this year. Harlingen is one of the scores of medium-sized airports without a glide slope. The Texas International jet pulled out of the landing attempt and flew on to Houston, trailing a strand of telephone wire over its wing.

Statistics show that only 58 new ILS systems have been installed in the last six years.

Most of the airports that lack the equipment are small fields that handle only scattered propeller plane landings daily. But often-crowded DC-9 and 737 jets fly into a score or more cities that also are without the bad-weather help.

Many of the airports without glide slope equipment are serving college towns with such schools as Yale, Iowa, Missouri, West Virginia, Texas A. and M., Mississippi, Cornell, Indiana and Oklahoma State.

Stiff Charge Laid In Purse-Snatching

A 19-year-old unemployed man who grabbed a handbag from an old lady so roughly he broke the strap pleaded guilty Tuesday in provincial court to a charge of robbery.

Information read before Judge William Ostler alleged that Peter MacKenzie, of 548 Niagara, stole the handbag of 84-year-old Ethel Walton in Beacon Hill Park Monday "and for that purpose did use violence, thereby committing robbery under the criminal code."

He was remanded to Nov. 27.

"Was the woman injured in any way?" Ostler asked prosecutor William Anderson, who replied: "No."

"It was simply a matter of snatching a handbag," the judge said.

The charge of robbery, which means theft with violence, is one of the most serious crimes covered by the Criminal Code and carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment and whipping upon conviction.

Court was told MacKenzie did not knock the elderly woman down or hurt her, but that when he snatched her handbag he ripped the strap.

The handbag, which contained $10, was recovered when MacKenzie dropped it a few yards away as he fled. He was sezied by bystanders.

He told Ostler he stole the handbag in desperation because he could not find work, could not draw welfare and his pregnant wife was threatening to leave if he didn't find some money.

"We couldn't do anything," he said. "We couldn't get any money. Sse said she'd leave me if I didn't get any money."

MacKenzie, who recently came from Toronto, said he had been "knocking on doors" in Vancouver and Victoria in desperate search for a job.

"I tried all over the Island and I couldn't get one. I went to welfare and they said I wasn't eligible. Manpower said I wouldn't be able to go back to school for at least six months and I might have to wait up to two years. There was nothing else to do."

Budget Estimates Out $500 Million

By WAYNE MACDONALD
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government plans in coming months to pump $60 million into a battle against unemploymtnt, which is expected this winter to be the highest in years.

High unemployment and resultant increases in welfare costs havce already combined to wipe away the surplus Finance Minister Edgar Benson forecast in his last budget, the Commons was told Tuesday.

Instead of the anticipated surplus of $250 million, the federal government will wind up the fiscal year next March with a deficit of approximately the same amount.

This was revealed Tuesday when Treasury Board President C. M. (Bud) Drury tabled supplementary estimates in the Commons for the current budget year.

Drury made clear outside the House that the main reason for the deficit was higher-than-expected welfare costs, which Ottawa shares with the provinces, and severe unemployment anticipated this winter.

Many government departments — notably public works, regional economic expansion, and the department of manpower — will be undertaking projects to make work for the jobless.

Drury said the special programs should create 11,000 man-years of work, or enough employment to hire 11,000 persons for one year.

Since many of the jobs will not last as long as a year, the total number of jobs created will be substantially higher, the treasury board president said.

The total supplementary estimates introduced Tuesday were $457,120,756. They bring total government spending for the fiscal year to $14.2 billion.

Of the near-half-billion dollars in increased spending, $195 million takes the form of statutory payments to the provinces and parliament has no authority over them. The remainder is for programs

Drury Hits Critics Of Watchdog Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury says the Conservatives should swallow their critical tongue on the government's bill to redefine the powers of the auditor-general, since the bill is based on a unanimous committee report assented to by PC representatives.

The bill, tabled in the Commons Monday, would place limits on Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's authority to tell Parliament about any case he thinks displays government blundering.

Under the bill he would have to limit his watchdog growling to ensuring that government accounts are properly kept and money is spent as directed by Parliament.

In an interview today, Drury said Baldwin's criticism of the bill in the Commons Monday was out of place considering the fact that the public accounts committee had unanimously suggested such a bill.

He "supposed" that Baldwin would have to reconcile his differences in view with the PC members of the committee.

In another interview moments later Baldwin said Dury was uttering "hogwash."

Baldwin didn't know how Conservative representatives on the committee had performed in considering the report on which the bill was based, he said, but even if they violently opposed the report's recommendations there is no provision for them filing a minority report.

Since the meetings to draft the report were held in camera, he said, there is no reason to believe that Con-

Ecology Scheme Could Employ 30,000 Students

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government may put students to work planting trees and clearing salmon streams on a massive scale next summer.

The program envisages up to 20,000 students replanting logged areas across the country, but concentrated in B.C., Quebec and the Maritimes where unemployment is highest. Some work would be done on the Prairies too.

In addition, another 10,000 could be put to work clearing and improving spawning streams, recreational beaches and park trails.

If undertaken, these make-work programs would be added to a repetition of last summer's successful experiment with crash programs to provide more civil service jobs and militia training for students unable to find vacation work.

One estimate is that it would only cost $12 million to employ 20,000 students — at $10 a day each — planting trees from June through August.

This offers a better cost-benefit ratio than the $8 million it took to provide six weeks of militia training for 10,500 last summer.

Ottawa is struggling with the problem now as part of its general planning to bring down the unemployment rate — a slow process at the best of times.

It doesn't want those efforts to be dislocated by extreme job competition from the rapidly increasing student population next summer. There were 306,000 students seeking jobs in 1970.

The vacation period poured 306,000 students seeking work into the labor market in 1968, 346,000 in 1969 and a crisis leve of about 425,000 last summer.

Next summer is expected to see more than 500,000 students on the job market, adding tremendous pressure to the weakest employment area.

Current statistics show that the unemployment rate is highest in the 19-24 age bracket at a 9 per cent national average. But some estimate the unemployment rate will approach 40 per cent for those between 19 and 24 by spring.

Longer-range policies are being considered to alleviate the problem for young persons who have left school and the short-range programs are intended to keep jobless students from complicating the recovery — especially since summer jobs in many cases will decide whether they return to school or join the permanent labor force.

Last summer's crash programs were undertaken in Mid-June after it became apparent that the student job problem had become critical because of the economic slowdown.

The government pumped almost $28 million into various programs, such as militia training, youth leadership, bilingual courses and extra civil service relief work to create a total of 36,101 summer jobs.

This year it will have to do much more, and the added forestation and stream-clearing programs could boost the total to 60,000 summer jobs if they are approved.

But considerable dexterity in management and luck will be needed to overcome a major obstacle — the shortage of tree nursery stock for a sudden and massive planting program of millions of trees.

Some seedlings could be purchased from the U.S. A substantial proportion of the students sent out into the woods could be employed in prepartory ground clearing programs for a second round of tree planting in the following summer.

Relief Supplies Race Death As Pakistan Toll Escalates

DACCA (CP) — Swiss and German aircraft ferried in tons of relief supplies today and President Nixon allocated $10 million to the international rehabilitation effort for survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that inundated a large area of East Pakistan six days ago.

Among Red Cross societies, Communist China's became the biggest single contributor to the Pakistan relief effort with a gift of $1.24 million, the International League of Red Cross Societies said today. The league said $2.07 million of combined cash and relief supplies have been provided or pledged thus far by 20 national Red Cross societies.

The number of dead remained incalculable. The government confirmed 55,000, but unofficial estimates were from 300,000 to 650,000; the Pakistani relief commissioner, A. M. Anisuzzaman, said he could neither challenge nor confirm them.

CRITICISM

Criticism mounted in Dacca that not enough is being done to help save hundreds of thousands of survivors.

The pro-government newspaper Morning News said: "This is an unparallelled national disaster and should be treated as such . . . at least let us not fail the survivors."

The Pakistan Observer, an independent daily owned by former foreign minister Hamidul Huq Choudhury, claimed "relief goods arriving from foreign countries remain dumped in Dacca as no carrier is available to airdrop them . . . Therefore, relief has not reached thousands of survivors in the offshore islands even six days after the disaster."

Dozens of small islands in the Bay of Bengal were still untouched by relief workers. Survivors told reporters their drinking water came from pools befouled by bodies of human beings and cattle, and their only food was rotting rice kernels they burned before eating to kill the stench.

DISCOUNT CHOLERA

"The incidence of cholera is insignificant compared to other problems of relief here," said Dr. Wiley Mosley, chief of epidemology of the cholera laboratory run by Pakistan and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

Bonn, Warsaw Heal Bitter War Wounds

WARSAW (Reuter) — Poland and West Germany today endorsed an historic treaty to heal the wounds of the Second World War and put their relations on a normal footing after 25 years.

The accord consists of a preamble and five articles, the first of which officials said settled the key issue of recognition by Bonn of Poland's post war western frontier along the Oder and Neisse rivers.

Mail Service to Stop 7 Days at Year-End

TORONTO (CP) — Mail service during the Christmas and New Year period this year will be cancelled for a total of seven days, a post office spokesman said Tuesday.

But there will be parcel-post delivery on two Saturdays during the pre-Christmas rush — Dec. 12 and 19, he said. Letter delivery will also be provided Dec. 19.

A spokesman for the Canadian Bankers Association said chartered banks will be closed from Dec. 25 to 27 and from Jan. 1 to 3 inclusive.

Moon Buggy Resumes TV Surface Scanning

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russia's moon buggy has started sending good quality television pictures of the lunar surface back to earth, Tass news agency said today.

Lunokhod's chief designer today explained in Red Star, the armed forces newspaper, how the robot was controlled from earth.

He said the chassis incorporated a number of automatic devices to increase safety of movement, to help control movement, and to carry out scientific experiments to measure the mechanical properties of lunar soil.

The robot has a number of commands to control Lunokhod's movement forward and reverse movement can be carried out as a continuous motion or in stages, when it has "stop-go" motion.

The chassis also incorporates an instrument for collecting scientific information about lunar rock. On command from earth, it automatically carried out a program of measurement of its mechanical properties, the designer wrote.

ARGENTINA MOB SCENE

Machineguns Kill 1

CATAMARCA, Argentina (UPI) — One teenager was killed and 10 other persons wounded today when federal police opened fire with submachineguns on a mob storming Government House demanding the resignation of Gov. Guillermo Brizuela.

Police guarding the building fired on the mob from windows when an attempt was made to force entry. A girl, Maria Dora Pacheco, 19, was killed instantly. A 14-year-old boy identified only as "Aguero" was in critical condition.

The group of about 400 persons that marched on the government office was part of a mob of some 2,000 persons angry at the governor for refusing local police demands for a wage increase. Local police wanted their monthly wage raised from $48 a month to $81, and also sought better equipment.

Army troops were moved into this town, about 1,100 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, to restore order after disgruntled police seized the city jail. About one-fourth of the town's 1,000 policemen participated in the revolt movement. They were quickly rounded up by troops and jailed.

IN MANDARIN

'Ma' Is 'Mother' But Also 'Horse'

By Jack Scott

They aren't exactly smashing down the doors to get to Mr. Hsiao's classes, you understand, but now that we've come around to formal recognition of China there'll be all sorts of Canadian businessmen and diplomats in need of a language in the compatible causes of profits and peace. The queues may start forming at any moment.

It bodes ill, one might say, for Harry Hsiao who is 34, Formosa-born, just arrived here from six years at Harvard to teach Chinese at the University of Victoria. You could search far and wide without finding a more likeable man, but Mr. Hsiao's subject could so easily drive any Occidental student toward the brink of fury or madness that killing the teacher might seem the only way out.

Scott

Just learning how to pronounce Mr. Hsiao's name may take the better part of a morning. In the Mandarin language, you see, an "h" is silent when followed by an "s" and an "s", properly pronounced, sounds somewhat like a swarm of angry bees.

It is just one of the many facts that may raise some east-west communication problems more impenetrable than mere ideological differences.

Mandarin is the required language for two reasons. One reason is that half a billion Chinese speak it, give or take a million. The other is that the People's Republic is determined, in the cause of national unity, that it will be the official, common tongue throughout that vast land.

Since there's a bewildering variety of provincial dialects it makes our own bilingual difficulties seem relatively light. What's more, the aim is to teach the pure Peking dialect—rather like Parisian French is to less cultured forms—so that even people who do speak Mandarin are often caught up in that most arbitrary of disciplines, rejecting what they've learned on their mother's knees.

The dilemma may be seen in the fact that more than half the 20 students in Mr. Hsiao's first class are Canadian-born Chinese whose ancestors came originally from the southern provinces of Kwantung and Kwangsi. Mandarin, to them, is truly a foreign language.

Having once had a go at learning Cantonese I can sympathize with them. To count to 10 in Canton, using the most elementary phonetics, you would say "yut, yee, sum, see, ng, loke, chut, bart, gow, sup." To count to 10 in the Peking dialect you would say, "Yee, er, san, si, wu, liou, chi, ba, jo, sh." Even then, without a complete course in the phonetic code nobody in Peking would know what in the world you were talking about and might just bring you a plate of barbecued duck.

The difficulty is compounded for the Occidental, from the very outset, by the fact that he must learn to use his lips, tongue, teeth, throat and nose in an entirely new sound-producing mechanism.

It's small comfort, perhaps, but this is a problem that works in reverse. In all but a few Oriental dialects there's no sound for our "v" or "r", which aren't in the Mandarin language, and so the purely physical necessity of learning how to produce a new noise—much less a new word—becomes square one. This explains why most Orientals, called upon to say "ripe on the vine" (though they may not be called upon to say it often) will make it "lipe on the wine."

★ ★ ★

The late Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond and a man absolutely terrified of flying, had a memorable experience with this once when, boarding a Japan Air Lines plane for a flight to Tokyo, he was welcomed aboard by the lovely stewardess with: "Ah, Mr. Freming — have a good fright!"

Perhaps the fundamental difference between English and Mandarin is that the Chinese language requires the use of tones to establish meaning. It is this that causes what we choose—to call the "sing song" characteristic of Chinese speech, a thing that we sometimes find almost as hilarious as the Chinese find our monotonous, non-melodic drone.

The tonal system is not to be confused, Mr. Hsiao points out, with expression as we use it in English. There are said to be 98 different ways of saying "yes" in English — angrily, soothingly, inquiringly, endearingly, doubtfully and so on. It is still "yes." Not so in Mandarin, in which the four basic tones create four totally different words. Some teachers (though not Mr. Hsiao) actually have their students tune up at a piano, a further complication if the students happen to be tone-deaf.

I see that you're yawning and scratching, so we'll limit this to one brief, simple example. Take the Mandarin word "ma." Now, if you say "ma" in one tone it means "mother." If your voice rises rapidly from the mid-range to the top of your range, it means "hemp." If it dips to the low range and rises to the mid-range it means "horse." If it starts near the top of the range and falls rapidly to the bottom it means "scold." Give up?

Obviously a language so tricky that you might inadvertently call your wife's mother a horse must be treated with extreme caution even though it has been understood longer and by more people than any other in the world.

The actual writing of Mandarin is so much more intimidating than merely speaking it that Mr. Hsiao doesn't even mention it in the first year of his course. True, some Chinese characters look vaguely like the word they represent ("tree" looks like a tree), but in 3500 years of evolution this pictograph method has become so refined that nowadays only the scholars are aware of the derivations. Taking just the sound of my first name, for example, Mr. Hsiao wrote down the characters which come out as "hero" and "overcome," a thing I will be happy to explain to you anytime tomorrow between three and four o'clock.

Like every Oriental language, Mandarin is wonderfully courteous — your home is "grand palace" and my home is "humble nest", your name is "honorable name" while my name is "humble name" — and, to give Mr. Hsiao the final word, it probably really isn't that much more difficult than English itself.

"After all," said Mr. Hsiao impishly, "what could be more difficult than a language like English in which fish may be spelled 'ghoti'? 'Gh' as in tough, 'o' as in women, 'ti' as in nation. It spells fish, yes?

Which was, you might say, one up for honorable teacher over humble student.

Water Drive Pays

A total of 4,320,000 gallons of water was saved last week for the spawning salmon at Goldstream through the voluntary efforts of citizens.

Greater Victoria Water Board commissioner Ron Upward said today the average consumption of water for this time of the year is 109,300,000 gallons a week.

But last week it dropped to 105,980,000 gallons.

Upward said water is still being pumped from Council Creek through a new tunnel to help swell Goldstream.

"The problem will be solved if we get another six inches of rain. It doesn't take long to fill up the lakes once the ground has absorbed all the water it can take."

POLLUTION, POLICY LACK KILL FISH

Sooke Watershed Creeks 'Doomed'

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A large salmon run in five waterways, including the Sooke River, will be wiped out unless conservation measures are taken soon.

This warning was sounded today by fisheries officials, conservationists and biologists.

Federal fisheries guardian Jack Brooks of Sooke said several creeks in 15 to 20 years will be reduced to the same state as Colquitz and Bowker in Greater Victoria.

They will be polluted and in summer bone dry.

"The creeks could be saved under a water resource conservation program," he said. "But as things are going on now most creeks are doomed."

At stake is a salmon spawning stock which runs as high as 80,000 during peak years, capable of producing 480 million frys.

Under proper management the spawning stock could be tripled.

The waterways involved are the Sooke River, Stoney, Tugwell, Muir and Kirby Creeks.

Citizen groups are so concerned with the growing environmental problem at Sooke and Goldstream they have called a meeting for next Tuesday.

The meeting sponsored by the Victoria branch, Community Planning Association of Canada, will be held at 8 p.m. in the board room of the Capital Regional District, 26 Bastion Square.

Howard English, president of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, appealed to residents for support in getting senior governments to act on conservation measures.

"If no conservations measures are taken to save these creeks, we eventually not only lose fish, but fresh water and esthetic assets," he said. "In other words we will waste three resources."

The problems vary from creek to creek. In the case of Tugwell, Kirby and Muir, logging practices have affected the run-off and water temperatures. But of immediate concern are the Sooke River, De Mamiel and Stoney Creeks.

Lack of co-ordination between the federal fisheries department, the provincial water rights department, and the department of municipal affairs is slowly depriving the creeks of water, conservationists say.

Water Stored For Salmon Usurped For Home Use

De Mamiel with its headwaters in the Sooke Hills and emptying into the Sooke River near the entrance to Sooke Park, is a good example. This is an important salmon producing stream.

The federal fisheries department over the years has taken steps to preserve water for fish by building temporary dams. (Last year a concrete one was built near Young's Lake)

At the same time the water rights department has been issuing more and more water licences for domestic use without regard for the minimum flow of water, conservationists say.

So the water which is being stored for fish is being used for domestic purposes.

And now the fisheries department is considering a plan to build more dams, but conservationists are wondering if they will be of any use because there is now a possibility of subdivisions north of Young Lake.

A senior water rights official said that under the Water Act he has no alternative but to issue water licences for domestic use.

David Anderson, MP for Saanich-Esquimalt, also chairman of the Commons environmental and renewable resources committee, says Canada is behind Britain, Sweden, Germany and other European countries in providing regulations to protect streams.

"In Switzerland, a very capitalist country, a property owner can't even cut down a tree by a stream without special permission," he said.

"Here, because of the lack of planning, we destroy our natural resources and sometimes spend millions to renew what we have destroyed and could have saved."

The answer, conservationists say is for the government to permit the regional district to undertake conservation programs for the preservation of natural environment.

This is done in Ontario where municipalities, the provincial and federal governments provide grants or funds for the preservation of water and natural environment.

The only conservation measures the B.C. government has taken so far are large-scale projects in relatively remote areas.

Pat Bay Section Nearly Done

Highway crews hope to complete the southern section of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes between Island View Road and Sidney before bad weather sets in, an official said today.

The northern section would be widened to four lanes in spring or as soon as weather is suitable, said the highways department official.

Commenting on complaints at Central Saanich council this week about that stretch of the highway, the official admitted there are problems because traffic must be switched as road work progresses.

White lines couldn't be put down because they would have to be constantly erased and this is difficult.

Flagmen have been posted with personnel present in the evenings, at least until the last ferry, he said. The problem was not so great in daytime when crews are at work and drivers can see better.

One of the main problems, he said, is that motorists won't slow down in construction zone areas.

The connection to the airport is not completed but it will be in three weeks—if there are five days of paving weather. In the meantime, the detour continues.

The highways department official said work at the Royal Oak section is going well but won't be really completed until spring or summer.

The work will be completed gradually and as it is, new sections will come into use. The new freeway section near Quadra should be in use in about two weeks.

Further north, a traffic light system has been installed at Mount Newton Cross Road and should be in operation soon.

Traffic Called Region Task

Regional chairman Hugh Curtis said today the region's staff is the only body competent to handle transportation studies of the kind suggested Tuesday by Victoria city council.

Curtis said the city's proposed plan would be a "duplication" of what the regional district is at present carrying out.

The statement came following an offer by Victoria to pool its traffic engineering facilities with those of the province to see what kind of transportation and land use study would best serve the needs of the whole region.

A statement from Curtis said the regional district "has been involved in regional planning for the last 10 months.

"Despite this short period it has reviewed the previous work of the Capital Regional Planning Board and puts high priority on the need to bring forward a new regional plan.

"A current report received at the last committee meeting strongly recommends that the region not fall into the pitfall of studying transportation in isolation. The approach, the mistake of the 50s, and early 60s in many North American centres, ignores the fact that transportation must be related to the form desired for the city and region.

"The board in the first half of 1971 will be considering and putting to the public alternative concepts for the future of this region, these in turn will involve alternative transportation systems."

The statement said it is hoped that the city of Victoria as well as the other municipalities and provincial government will co-operate in these studies.

Voluntary Arbitration 'Should Bind'

Victoria lawyer E. E. Pearlman today proposed a change in labor legislation which would permit voluntary arbitration boards to impose binding contract settlements.

And he called for an end to the "adversary approach" in contract negotiations which he blamed as the cause of most failures to reach settlements.

Pearlman was elaborating on remarks he made Tuesday night at a meeting of the Administrative Management Society.

He said voluntary arbitration boards are possible under existing laws, but their judgments are not binding. Pearlman proposed legislative changes permitting an option for voluntary board decisions to be binding.

In cases where both parties decided not to seek a binding decision, and refused the voluntary board's ruling, government should settle the dispute.

This could be done under existing provisions of the Mediation Commission Act or through some other government body, he said.

Pearlman criticized the negative position which the B.C. Federation of Labor has taken toward the act. He said provincial labor laws give the advantage to labor, not management.

But he said neither side should feel existing laws are unfair.

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said Pearlman has "a very unrealistic view of collective bargaining."

His suggestions, Ryan said, are "diametrically opposed to recommendations of the 1968 report of the Woods Task Force on labor relations."

He said Pearlman's labor-management views are further to the right than Premier Bennett's.

BUILD TRUST

Pearlman said labor and management should meet throughout the year, not just at bargaining time. Increased communication would help build the trust necessary for bargaining in good faith.

Ryan said labor has no objection to suggestions for improved labor-management relations. But Pearlman's pro-management views, he said, disqualify him as a labor relations expert.

SIDNEY WOMAN KILLED

A middle-aged Sidney woman was killed this morning in a two-car collision at Mills and MacDonald Park Roads.

RCMP withheld the name of the victim. The name of the other driver was not available. The two women drivers were the only occupants of the cars. Police said the other driver was not injured.

The accident took place about 7 a.m. at the intersection on the western edge of Sidney. Police said one car struck the other broadside.

Arthur Mayse . . .

EDWARD M. WILSON IS A school teacher now employed at Duncan, V. N. R. Sewell turned from teaching to other pursuits in 1967. But for a number of years, both taught at S. J. Willis junior secondary. While so engaged, they shared a conviction that the boy or girl with questions to ask about sex deserves an honest answer.

So they decided to collaborate on a sex guide with a difference. It would be direct, comprehensive and explicit, and they would write it in a language that a junior high kid would understand.

Last December, Sewell and Wilson gave the final licks to their sketch-illustrated manuscript. They banged off one copy to a Toronto publishing house and another to a publisher in New York.

About two weeks later, a note arrived from the Canadian publisher. Their submission had been received, but a verdict wouldn't be forthcoming for at least eight weeks.

A couple of days later, Macfadden-Bartell of New York got in touch. Their book had been accepted. It would be brought out in paperback, for a guaranteed minimum of 100,000 copies. Advance offered on royalties was $2,000.

While Norman Sewell filled me in on the project, I leafed through the book. It's breezily titled, Let's Tell It Like It Is. Sub-title is "A sex guide for young adults."

As the authors intended it to do, it deals with all aspects of sex clearly, matter-of-factly, and without the slightest trace of moralizing.

"We wrote our book mostly because we were disappointed with sex education in Victoria," Sewell told me. "It was, let's say, Victorian — and it still is. We intended to answer the questions that get asked at school, but don't receive explicit replies."

And that, they felt was a pity. In their experience, they've found the student at junior secondary level highly sensible in his attitude to sex education.

"No giggling," Sewell said. "They're serious in approach, and eager to learn."

The book came out in the United States earlier this year. Sewell has heard that some copies are now on Victoria stands, but he hasn't so far seen any.

My own reaction to the book is mixed. Even though the sexual revolution is once more proclaimed on its back cover, I'm by no means sure that sex can be divorced from morality all that easily. And in spite of co-author Sewell's assurance, I doubt that every child of junior high school age is emotionally equipped to absorb total sex instruction without guidance and at a gulp.

This, of course, may be merely my generation gap showing. Certainly, the Wilson-Sewell treatment is an infinite improvement over formal sex education as I received it.

In the shape of a tract, that is, thrust into my hand by an embarrassed adult, who promptly fled the scene. Nothing was explained. That wasn't the idea. The intent, in fact, was to scare the devil out of any curious-minded sprout who might read it.

A FISHING TYPE EMployed in printing biz tells me that he has a chore to be looked after next weekend. This, he insists, is to knock a hole in the bottom of his utility boat so its cargo of salt water can run out.

He picked up the water last Sunday morning in the course of a journey that he will not soon forget.

As he tells the story, he was fishing for winter springs off Strongtide Island at the top end of the Chatham group when a puff or two of breeze rippled the saltchuck. Then, with no further warning, the wind began to blow hard from the southeast.

By the time our guy had his lines in, a brisk chop was making.

He headed for home, but the wind ran faster. Before he was halfway across Baynes Channel mouth, the whitecaps of a mean and untidy sea were giving his boat a beating. A crest exploded against the bows and tossed water inboard.

The crossing at that point became a struggle for survival. A less handy boatman mightn't have made it. As it was, he nursed his craft into Telegraph Cove with enough water sloshing in it to swim a salmon.

Since he's a keen fisherman, I expect he will change his mind about whacking a hole in his boat. But as he freely admits, he never had or expects to have a closer call.

Soviet Tracks In Cambodia

SAIGON (Reuter) — South Vietnamese troops found fresh tank tracks today to confirm the presence of Soviet-made medium tanks in northeastern Cambodia, military sources said.

The tracks were apparently made by North Vietnamese T-34 tanks, and were near a 250-ton dump of ammunition for the T-34's 85-millimetre gun found Tuesday in Cambodia's Ratanakiri province, the sources said.

On the two brief occasions that Soviet-made light tanks have appeared in South Vietnam they were used for shock effect on Special Forces encampments. The last time they appeared was more than 20 months ago.

In the last three days, South Vietnamese forces totalling 6,300 men have entered Ratanakiri, a province which was under unchallenged guerrilla control for more than four months.

The new drive into Ratanakiri from South Vietnam's central highlands is the first operation into northeast Cambodia since the joint U.S.-South Vietnamese operations in May and June.

It is believed the new operation was launched to forestall any guerrilla drive into the central highlands, the region long considered most likely to be the scene of any new offensive.

A booby trap killed five American soldiers today as they moved through foothills 42 miles southeast of Da Nang.

American officers have become so alarmed over a recent rash of booby trap and mine deaths that they are offering cash rewards to peasants who tip them off to locations of the deadly devices. Of 53 Americans reported killed in combat in the last 12 days, 30 have been the victims of booby traps and mines.

STIFF UPPER LIP

CORNWALLIS, N.S. (CP) — A magnificent moustache was at stake—the facial foliage for the past 20 years of the base warrant officer at Canadian Forces Base Cornwallis.

Chief Warrant Officer J. G. Austin pledged one quarter of an inch of his moustache for each $100 the base central charities campaign exceeded its objective.

Apparently encouraged by visions of the base disciplinarian getting clipped, the recruits and staff pushed the total to more than $1,000—or 2½ inches of moustache—over the objective.

During a commander's parade, Nursing Sister Lieut. Cathy Holland wielded a huge set of clippers and amputated 1¼ inches from each side of the quivering moustache. The pledge was honored in full.

Pope's Australian Visit Calls for Exact Planning

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — When Pope Paul comes to Australia he will travel 69.65 miles by road and take six hours 50 minutes to do it.

That exactitude typifies the planning for the Nov. 30-Dec. 3 visit.

The need for such planning is the crowd expected to turn out. Roman Catholic authorities expect 500,000 people to attend a mass to be held Dec. 1 at the Randwick race track.

"This is the biggest single task of its type ever undertaken in an enclosed area in Australia," said Asher Joel, deputy chairman for a citizens' welcome committee.

The 200-acre race track three miles from downtown Sydney was chosen because it is the only place capable of coping with such a crowd.

Bookmakers' stands will be moved and the betting board camouflaged. A specially-designed altar is being built. There will be 10,000 dwarf marigolds and white petunias about the podium.

Roman Catholics in Australia's bicentenary marking the 12.7 million population. The visit coincides with Australia's bicentenary, marking the landing of Capt. James Cook and the start of the country's colonization.

"We want to show that all Australian Catholics and non-Catholics are proud the Pope is coming in our bicentenary year," Joel said.

TO SKIP SERVICE

The visit has caused dissension among Protestants, however. It started when the Anglican Archbishop of Sydney, Most Rev. Marcus L. Loane, announced he would skip interdenominational services for Christian unity to be attended by the Pope.

The Roman Catholic Church and the Australian Council of Churches are inviting 2,250 churchmen to the service.

"There are questions of truth which must be resolved before we can share in common worship or in unfettered fellowship with the Roman Catholic Church," Archbishop Loane said.

But the Anglican Archbishop of Melbourne, Most Rev. Frank Woods, who is acting primate of Australia, said he hoped to attend.

Aeration Proposed

Police Unaware Trio in Closet

QUEBEC (CP)—Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Tuesday that police who arrested a suspect in the kidnapping and slaying of former labor minister Pierre Laporte were unaware three other suspects were hiding in a secret compartment in the same apartment where the arrest was made.

Mr. Choquette told the Quebec national assembly the three men were apparently hiding in a walk-in clothes closet in the west-end Montreal apartment when Bernard Lortie was arrested Nov. 6.

Mr. Choquette said brothers Paul and Jacques Rose and Francis Simard were apparently in the secret closet and escaped when, at 6:30 p.m. the following day, police on guard in the apartment left temporarily.

The justice minister said that although police had not been entirely successful in their investigations of the kidnappings so far, this was no time to criticize them.

He described as "inopportune" a statement by Prime Minister Trudeau in the Commons Nov. 10 in which Mr. Trudeau said the failure of police investigations was part of the reason for the invocation of the War Measures Act. Mr. Choquette said the remark could have affected police morale.

A newspaper report in Montreal said a high-level police investigation is under way to determine how a tape recording of two incarcerated persons was smuggled out of provincial police headquarters where they are being detained.

The three-minute recording by lawyer Robert Lemieux and labor leader Michel Chartrand, both charged with seditious conspiracy and being members of the outlawed FLQ, was played Tuesday at a news conference.

The Gazette quotes an unidentified QPP spokesman as saying the force's police director, Maurice St. Pierre, is aware of the tape recording and "something is going to be done about it."

Polluting Companies 'Should Lose Profits'

CHICAGO (AP) — Companies that cause air and water pollution should be put into "environmental receivership" and required to spend their profits on pollution control, consumer advocate Ralph Nader suggested Tuesday.

Such a receivership would not force a company to fold and would not throw its employees out of work, Nader said.

"Only one per cent of the corporate profits in this country last year was used to stop ongoing pollution," he added.

Nader made the suggestion in an address to the opening session of the Midwest Regional Conference on Science, Technology and State Government.

Other recommendations by Nader included giving the federal agencies now being regrouped into the new environmental Protection Agency the same regulatory powers as the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"The SEC can put brokerages out of business because of relatively trivial violations," he added. "Why can't those same sanctions be used in the industrial area?

Ottawa Backs Birth Control

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has backed up its September decision to engage in birth control programs with $1,505,000, all of it to be used internationally.

A $1,000,000 grant will go to the United Nations fund for population activities and another $505,000 will be contributed to the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

Both sums were included in supplementary spending estimates tabled in the Commons Tuesday.

There was no sign of funds for a domestic family planning program although Health Minister John Munro announced last September that one would be undertaken.

City May Support Merchants' Program

Victoria council's B Committee Tuesday approved part of a plan to spruce up the 600 block of Yates Street and buy a parking lot on the north side.

The move was the result of negotiations with businesses on the block which have recommended a long-range plan of improvements for the area.

Council will be asked to ratify the committee's decision to pay 25 per cent of the costs of widening sidewalks and install plants and benches. Businesses on the block will pay the balance.

By buying Mac's parking lot, council will maintain control in the area which is expected to attract land buyers and developers.

It was also decided not to proceed "at this time" with two proposed phases of the long-range plan which would include pedestrian malls behind stores on the the north side of Yates.

Cost of the parking lot could be as high as $145,000.

More Lights to Fight Drug Abuse in Square

A request to improve the lighting in Bastion Square was approved Tuesday by Victoria council's B Committee which heard complaints that a "drug culture" has degraded the square's appeal.

A letter from the Bastion Square Association said "it is apparent that the growing congregation of Victoria's drug culture around the Langley Street entrance to the Churchill Hotel beer parlor has seriously undermined the appeal of Bastion Square."

The committee agreed to improve the lighting while preserving the valued old gas lamp standards.

The letter adds that local merchants believe police are "doing their best to hold the line against this worsening situation and wish to avoid encumbering them with a public controversy such as arose in Centennial Square.

Crisis Vote Requested

Provincial cabinet approval will be sought to hold referendums to build 472 emergency classrooms throughout the province at a cost of $25 million, Education Minister Donald Brothers said Tuesday.

The amounts to be approved for submission to the voters include $1.1 million for Campbell River, $658,000 for Courtenay, $602,000 for Cowichan and $893,000 for Vancouver Island north.

All capital borrowing by school boards must be approved by ratepayers but in the past year the government has been allowing only emergency classroom needs to be met.

Bothers said another $26 million in emergency spending had been allowed up to October of this year, and hoped the new approvals, if accepted by the voters, would prevent overcrowding of schools in the 1971-72 year.

ENZYME ACTIVE all Concentrated for Automatics

We gave Mrs. Dunfield an advanced pack of new lower phosphate "all", reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"I first started using "all" when we lived in the interior of B.C. The water was hard there and "all" gave me very satisfactory results. Also the concentrated action of "all" made it easier on my automatic washer. I have used "all" regularly since. The new low-phosphate "all" seems to wash just as well and is O.K. by me."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining "all's" high quality performance.

$60 Million for Jobless

Budget Estimates Off $500 Million

By WAYNE MACDONALD
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government plans in coming months to pump $60 million into a battle against unemploymtnt, which is expected this winter to be the highest in years.

High unemployment and resultant increases in welfare costs havce already combined to wipe away the surplus Finance Minister Edgar Benson forecast in his last budget, the Commons was told Tuesday.

Instead of the anticipated surplus of $250 million, the federal government will wind up the fiscal year next March with a deficit of approximately the same amount.

This was revealed Tuesday when Treasury Board President C. M. (Bud) Drury tabled supplementary estimates in the Commons for the current budget year.

Drury made clear outside the House that the main reason for the deficit was higher-than-expected welfare costs, which Ottawa shares with the provinces, and severe unemployment anticipated this winter.

Many government departments — notably public works, regional economic expansion, and the department of manpower — will be undertaking projects to make work for the jobless.

Drury said the special programs should create 11,000 man-years of work, or enough employment to hire 11,000 persons for one year.

Since many of the jobs will not last as long as a year, the total number of jobs created will be substantially higher, the treasury board president said.

The total supplementary estimates introduced Tuesday were $457,120,756. They bring total government spending for the fiscal year to $14.2 billion.

Of the near-half-billion dollars in increased spending, $195 million takes the form of statutory payments to the provinces and parliament has no authority over them. The remainder is for programs

Drury Hits Critics Of Watchdog Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury says the Conservatives should swallow their critical tongue on the government's bill to redefine the powers of the auditor-general, since the bill is based on a unanimous committee report assented to by PC representatives.

The bill, tabled in the Commons Monday, would place limits on Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's authority to tell Parliament about any case he thinks displays government blundering.

Under the bill he would have to limit his watchdog growling to ensuring that government accounts are properly kept and money is spent as directed by Parliament.

In an interview today, Drury said Baldwin's criticism of the bill in the Commons Monday was out of place considering the fact that the public accounts committee had unanimously suggested such a bill.

He "supposed" that Baldwin would have to reconcile his differences in view with the PC members of the committee.

In another interview moments later Baldwin said Dury was uttering "hogwash."

Baldwin didn't know how Conservative representatives on the committee had performed in considering the report on which the bill was based, he said, but even if they violently opposed the report's recommendations there is no provision for them filing a minority report.

Since the meetings to draft the report were held in camera, he said, there is no reason to believe that Con-

Ecology Scheme Could Employ 30,000 Students

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government may put students to work planting trees and clearing salmon streams on a massive scale next summer.

The program envisages up to 20,000 students replanting logged areas across the country, but concentrated in B.C., Quebec and the Maritimes where unemployment is highest. Some work would be done on the Prairies too.

In addition, another 10,000 could be put to work clearing and improving spawning streams; recreational beaches and park trails.

If undertaken, these make-work programs would be added to a repetition of last summer's successful experiment with crash programs to provide more civil service jobs and militia training for students unable to find vacation work.

One estimate is that it would only cost $12 million to employ 20,000 students — at $10 a day each — planting trees from June through August.

This offers a better cost-benefit ratio than the $8 million it took to provide six weeks of militia training for 10,500 last summer.

Ottawa is struggling with the problem now as part of its general planning to bring down the unemployment rate — a slow process at the best of times.

It doen't want those efforts to be dislocated by extreme job competition from the rapidly increasing student population next summer. There were 306,000 students seeking jobs in 1970.

The vacation period poured 306,000 students seeking work into the labor market in 1968, 346,000 in 1969 and a crisis level of about 425,000 last summer.

Next summer is expected to see more than 500,000 students on the job market, adding tremendous pressure to the weakest employment area.

Current statistics show that the unemployment rate is highest in the 19-24 age bracket at a 9 per cent national average. But some estimate the unemployment rate will approach 40 per cent for those between 19 and 24 by spring.

Longer-range policies are being considered to alleviate the problem for young persons who have left school and the short-range programs are intended to keep jobless students from complicating the recovery — especially since summer jobs in many cases will decide whether they return to school or join the permanent labor force.

Last summer's crash programs were undertaken in mid-June after it became apparent that the student job problem had become critical because of the economic slowdown.

The government pumped almost $28 million into various programs, such as militia training, youth leadership, bilingual courses and extra civil service relief work to create a total of 36,101 summer jobs.

This year it will have to do much more, and the added forestation and stream-clearing programs could boost the total to 60,000 summer jobs if they are approved.

But considerable dexterity in management and luck will be needed to overcome a major obstacle — the shortage of tree nursery stock for a sudden and massive planting program of millions of trees.

Some seedlings could be purchased from the U.S. A substantial proportion of the students sent out into the woods could be employed in ground clearing programs for a second round of tree planting in the following summer.

Relief Supplies Race Death As Pakistan Toll Escalates

DACCA (CP) — Swiss and German aircraft ferried in tons of relief supplies today and President Nixon allocated $10 million to the international rehabilitation effort for survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that inundated a large area of East Pakistan six days ago.

Among Red Cross societies, Communist China's became the biggest single contributor to the Pakistan relief effort with a gift of $1.24 million, the International League of Red Cross Societies said today. The league said $2.07 million of combined cash and relief supplies have been provided or pledged thus far by 20 national Red Cross societies.

The number of dead remained incalculable. The government confirmed 55,000, but unofficial estimates were from 300,000 to 650,000; the Pakistani relief commissioner, A. M. Anisuzzaman, said he could neither challenge nor confirm them.

Criticism mounted in Dacca that not enough is being done to help save hundreds of thousands of survivors.

The pro-government newspaper Morning News said: "This is an unparallelled national disaster and should be treated as such . . . at least let us not fail the survivors."

The Pakistan Observer, an independent daily owned by former foreign minister Hamidul Huq Choudhury, claimed "relief goods arriving from foreign countries remain dumped in Dacca as no carrier is available to airdrop them . . . Therefore, relief has not reached thousands of survivors in the offshore islands even six days after the disaster."

Dozens of small islands in the Bay of Bengal were still untouched by relief workers. Survivors told reporters their drinking water came from pools befouled by bodies of human beings and cattle, and their only food was rotting rice kernels they burned before eating to kill the stench.

DISCOUNT CHOLERA

"The incidence of cholera is insignificant compared to other problems of relief here," said Dr. Wiley Mosley, chief of epidemology of the cholera laboratory run by Pakistan and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

Bonn, Warsaw Heal Bitter War Wounds

WARSAW (Reuter) — Poland and West Germany today endorsed a historic treaty to heal the wounds of the Second World War and put their relations on a normal footing after 25 years.

Foreign Ministers Stefan Jedrychowski and Walter Scheel initialled the accord at a ceremony in a small 19th-century palace where they reached final agreement Saturday.

The accord consists of a preamble and five articles, the first of which officials said settled the key issue of recognition by Bonn of Poland's post war western frontier along the Oder and Neisse rivers.

This gave Poland large areas of former German land.

Moon Buggy Resumes TV Surface Scanning

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russia's moon buggy has started sending good quality television pictures of the lunar surface back to earth, Tass news agency said today.

Lunokhod's chief designer today explained in Red Star, the armed forces newspaper, how the robot was controlled from earth.

He said the chassis incorporated a number of automatic devices to increase safety of movement, to help control movement, and to carry out scientific experiments to measure the mechanical properties of lunar soil.

The robot has a number of commands to control Lunokhod's movement forward and reverse movement can be carried out as a continuous motion or in stages, when it has "stop-go" motion.

The chassis also incorporates an instrument for collecting scientific information about lunar rock. On command from earth, it automatically carried out a program of measurement of its mechanical properties, the designer wrote.

Three Students Acquitted Of Charges Under War Act

AYLMER, Que. (CP) — Three university students charged under the War Measures Act were acquitted in court Tuesday by Judge James Millar.

Arrested Oct. 17 on a charge of discharging firearms, the day after the proclamation of the act by the federal government, were Thomas Gordon Dolan, 20, Laura Maud Dottin, 20, and Charles Felder Suddutch, 25, all residents of Ottawa and students at Carleton University.

Judge Miller said there was no proof that any of the accused had actually discharged the firearms found in a rountine police check of their car, which included rifles and ammunition.

All three students pleaded not guilty. They were detained for a week under the act and released on bail after the charges were laid.

Aylmer is seven miles northwest of Ottawa.

Legal Stick-Handling Goes On

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Justice Dalton Wells of the Ontario Supreme Court Tuesday reserved decision on a Crown application asking him to order a trial for Stafford Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs Hockey Club president, on income tax evasion charges.

County Court Judge Joseph Kelly earlier quashed charges against Smythe of evading payment of taxes on income totalling $289,372 and filing false or misleading returns.

The trial judge ruled he had no jurisdiction to try the case.

Judge Kelly agreed with Smythe's lawyer, J. J. Robinette, that prosecution under the Income Tax Act violated the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Robinette repeated his argument Tuesday for Chief Justice Wells. He said the rights of the individual were violated when the justice minister had the arbitrary power to decide whether to proceed summarily or by indictment.

A summary conviction under the Income Tax Act carries as penalty a fine and a possible jail term of up to two years. By indictment a conviction carries a mandatory jail term of at least two months with a five year maximum, he said.

Mr. Chief Justice Wells said he was not satisfied the act does in fact insist upon a jail sentence.

He suggested that Robinette's argument would, if successful, threaten the validity of many Canadian statutes. The powers of attorneys-general were traditionally very flexible, he said. For example in the case of a killing the Crown decided whether the charge would be murder or manslaughter. The guide, he said, was the gravity of the offence.

"It was not the intention of Parliament to alter the whole system of Canadian law by passing the Bill of Rights," Chief Justice Wells told Robinette. "The criminal law is cluttered up now with objections along the line of Judge Kelly's judgment."

HAWLEY STANDS THIRD WITH 421ST TRIUMPH

TORONTO (CP) — Sandy Hawley, 21, moved up another rung on the victories ladder Tuesday by booting home three more winners at Greenwood racetrack.

Hawley, an apprentice last year, now has 421 wins and his victories Tuesday surpassed the 419 picked up by Alverada Pineda in 1967.

Hawley's wins were aboard Campione in the first, Tiempo Muerto in the fourth and Captain Thunder in the eighth race.

A thief attacked the Vicomtesse Jacqueline de Ribes as, wearing only a towel, she stepped from the bathroom of her Claridge Hotel suite in London. He then fled with jewels first estimates valued at more than $240,000, police said today. Police said the thief seized and chloroformed the wife of French banker Vicomte de Ribes as she was preparing for a party at the U.S. Embassy Tuesday evening.

Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill, who called 10 Downing Street home during the years her husband was prime minister, returned today as guest of present Prime Minister Edward Heath. The widow of Sir Winston Churchill, now 85, was guest of honor along with other Churchill family members at a luncheon hosted by Heath.

The London cast of Kenneth Tynan's nude revue, Oh! Calcutta! have threatened to appear on stage dressed unless proper heating is installed in their West End theatre. "Turn the heat on by Thursday night or we get dressed," they have told the management of the Royalty Theatre where the revue is showing. The revue, which gives London theatre-goers their first sight of full frontal nudity under the glare of spotlights, opened during the summer in North London. It was later transferred to the West End.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Tuesday that his department had tried four times to help the Williston Lake Indians move to facilitate deeper filling of the Bennett Dam in northern British Columbia. In answer to a question by Gerald W. Baldwin (PC-Peace River), Chretien said officials of his department had spoken with the leaders of the Long Grass band four times but that the band refused to move from its reserve north of Dawson Creek.

Jackson, Miss., police said that two diamond rings valued at a total of $40,000 apparently were thrown out with the trash during confusion in the emergency room of a Jackson hospital. Mrs. Cordell Reid of Magnolia was wearing the rings when she received emergency treatment at the University Medical Centre. A nurse's aide told authorities the rings had blood on them. Police concluded the rings probably were thrown out with the trash.

Rae Britts, 24, a modern-day William Tell, used his air rifle to shoot a piece of wood from one boy's mouth, a candle from another's hand and a coin from the hand of a third. Britts, charged with assault, told magistrates court it was found Britts guilty, fined him an accident. The magistrate $120 and ordered the rifle destroyed.

Gastown To Fight Close Order

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city of Vancouver legal staff is studying the possibility of declaring Gastown an historic site in an attempt to avoid mandatory Sunday closing of business concerns in the downtown area.

An amendment to the Vancouver City Charter would be required at the next session of the provincial Legislature to make Gastown an historic site.

Campbell said he believes that special exemptions and privileges awarded historical areas may be enough to circumvent the controversial Sunday-closing issue.

Meanwhile, Gastown merchants have decided to remain open Sunday, Dec. 6, despite a threat of prosecution under the Lord's Day Act.

It is understood any evidence gained Dec. 6 would be sent to the attorney-general's department for a decision on possible charges.

Collection Agency 'Despicable'

EDMONTON (CP) — The tactics used by a collection agency were described Monday by Magistrate John Coughlan as "despicable."

The comment came after Ervin Martin Braithwaite, 23, of Edmonton, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of impersonating a police officer.

Ernest Reid, the crown prosecutor, told the court Braithwaite, while employed by a collection agency, had told a man in a telephone conversation he was a city detective and if a certain bill was not paid promptly the man and his wife would be arrested.

"These are despicable tricks to use," the magistrate said.

"It's absolutely deplorable that you could think you could gouge money out of people this way."

Reid told the court it was a condition of employment with the firm that employees had to represent themselves as police officers.

"I wish I had your employers before me now rather than you," the magistrate told Braithwaite.

Magistrate Coughlan reserved sentence to today to enable the probation service to provide more information about the accused.

Peterson In Hospital

A spokesman for his office said the attorney-general was ill over the weekend during and following the Social Credit convention in Vancouver and is expected to be in hospital three or four days.

A scheduled appearance before the Social Credit caucus for a discussion of labor relations was cancelled today.
